SATURDAY, DECEMBER 16, 1916

It is hard for the demon rum to keep his spirits up these days.

Military terms—A place of highest strategic importance, the place our side has captured. A place of absolutely no strategic importance, the place our army has evacuated.

It costs more to build warships in the United States than ever before. And it costs more to keep them afloat around Europe.

HOME MAKERS' WEEK PROGRAM ANNOUNCED

(By United Press to The Daily Bulletin)

CORVALLIS, DEC. 16.—Farmers' and Home-makers' Week for this year extends from January 2 to 6, 1917; the winter short course, which immediately follows, extends from January 8 to February 2. Excursion rates of one and one-third fare are offered on all railroads in Oregon. For specific information regarding either of these events write for a preliminary circular or a final program. Further announcement of the short course will be made next month.

Farmers' and Home-makers' Week, and rural life conferences will comprise lectures, exhibitions, demonstrations and entertainments, as well as conventions and conferences of some of the state's greatest industries. The hog producers' school will be one of the leading events of the week. The wheat show will be a novel and valuable attraction. The dairy interests will be handled even more dynamically than last year. The events of Home-makers' Week are exciting the utmost enthusiasm among home economics workers, as equaling anything of the kind yet offered by an agricultural college. The whole program, in short, is eminently worth while.

Following are the conventions that have already been scheduled for Farmers' and Home-makers' week:

- Jan. 2. Seed and potato growers' convention.
- Convention of organized farmers (next step in rural organization).
- Jan. 2-3. Nut convention.
- Cow Testing association convention.
- Jan. 2-4. Drainage convention.
- Jan. 2-6. A home makers' congress.
- Parent-teachers' convention.
- Hog producers' school.
- Convention of ministers and religious workers.
- Jan. 3. Rural legislative conference (a. marketing, b. rural credits, c. land title registration, d. agricultural lime).
- Oregon swine breeders' convention.
- Oregon Jersey breeders' convention.
- Oregon Guernsey breeders' convention.
- Oregon Holstein association. A thrift convention.
- Jan. 3-4-5. Northwest grain growers' convention.
- Wheat show.

- Jan. 4. Oregon state dairymen's convention.
- Jan. 4-5. Prune convention.
- Jan. 4-6. A road builders' convention.
- Jan. 5. A lime convention.
- Special dairy program.
- County agent council convention.
- Jan. 5-6. Tractor and stationary gas engine school.
- County, school superintendents and rural school supervisors convention.
- Jan. —. County fair officials conference.
- Jan. 6. Marketing convention.

MOTHER CROOK MOURNS LOST

"old" Crook county by some 300 votes.

While it doesn't appear that things have been lined up definitely yet, there are whispers that Collins Elkins would consent to become county judge if it were forced upon him, and there is even more persistent talk that Hugh Lakin of Beaver Creek would be willing to run against Blanchard. Lakin's territory, it is alleged, never got enough money spent on its roads to be worth mentioning, and its observant electorate isn't in an especially happy frame of mind regarding the present incumbents.

So old Mother Crook may be livened up with a nice sociable recall fight, which no doubt would serve to take her mind off her other troubles.

Object Lesson In Phonetics.

The Arabic, which boasts three separate sounds resembling the English letter "b," lacks the equivalent of "p;" therefore "p" and "b" are often confused. The late venerable Dr. Bliss of the Syrian Protestant college once entered a classroom where a native teacher was trying in vain to teach a student the difference between "p" and "b," says the Christian Herald. Dr. Bliss undertook the case. Gathering up some chalk dust in his hand and holding his hand to his lips, he spoke to the student:

"Do you see this dust in my hand? When I say 'b' I do not expel my breath, and the chalk dust stays where it is. But when I say 'p' I blow the dust all away." He did. He blew it all over the enlightened youth.

"Skirl" of the Bagpipes.

It is claimed for the Scottish bagpipe that it is louder than any other variety of instrument. This is probably because it was originally designed to cheer the clansmen when they were fighting. In the hands of a skilled performer the strains of a Highland bagpipe carry about six miles, and under specially favorable conditions as far as ten miles. The Duke of Sutherland owns a bagpipe which figured in the battle of Prestonpans, and must therefore be nearly 200 years old, yet it can be heard at a distance of eight miles.—London Globe.

Must Have the Chauffeur.

In Chile, while automobiles are quite common, the two seated runabout is not common, and when seen generally has a small seat behind for the chauffeur. This is demanded by custom, for even though the owner of the car is driving he must always have the chauffeur with him in case of need, as it would never do for the owner to change a tire or to crank the machine himself.

Hard Hearted.

"Poor Bickers has a very hard hearted wife," said Trivvet.
"What's the trouble now?" asked Dicer.
"She not only broke the broomstick over his head, but made him go to the store and buy another."

Method in His Madness.

Sandy (who is working up his better half for a small loan)—Ye ken weel, Maggie, if you wis tae dee I should gang daft. Mrs. Sandy—An' then ye'd marry again, I suppose. Sandy—Na, na. I wouldna gang as daft as that.—London Sketch.

Both Birds.

"Riches have wings."
"Yep. And creditors have bills."—Detroit Free Press.

Believe in the better side of men. It is optimism that really saves people.—MacIaren.

War's Harvest of Wealth to Be Distributed

By Lowell Mellett,

(United Press Staff Correspondent.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—The drippings from the overflowing vats of fat, rendered in Wall street from the munitions trade with warring Europe, will be distributed this week and next to employees as Christmas gifts that break all past records.

The fat drippings of today would have made a feast for both employers and employees during the lean holidays of 1913, before the European war.

Of course all the record breaking profits do not come directly out of the sale of powder and shrapnel and hospital supplies, but in which the trading out war materials that is behind the great stimulation of the street.

The bankers and brokers have it to give this year and they will never miss it. The only slight cloud on the horizon of the professional trader at this time of good will is the suggestion from Germany of peace. But this has been blown almost entirely away by the chill winds which greeted it in the allied capitals.

On a million share day in the stock exchange the profit to the brokers, in round numbers, is $250,000. Actually, the profits of brokers are much greater because the tabulated figures comprise only stocks handled in hundred share lots or more.

Brokers dealing directly on the New York stock exchange received $8,000,000 in commissions in the month of November of the trading in lots of a hundred or more, it was estimated.

They had this much income if they didn't earn another penny. But there is no law against a broker buying or selling stocks for himself, which is one way big profits are made.

"We've been too busy handling other people's orders," one broker complained ruefully, "to do much for ourselves."

There is the case, however, of one young man who worked as a stenographer a year ago and is now said to have $250,000 of his own stowed away in the bank, the money made out of a brokerage business set up on $5,000. His operations have all been on the curb market.

In the stock exchange with a $75,000 seat paid for by the firm for whom he was a telephone reporter five years ago is Robert C. Hanke.

Most Wall street stenographers, however, will go without seats on the exchange. They will have to be content with from $100 to $500. The latter sum is the figure predicted today for the smaller wage earners in the banking house of J. P. Morgan and company, though formal announcement of the firms has not been made.

Didn't Know McKinley.

Once when William McKinley was governor of Ohio he and Corbett had a long chat in a parlor of the principal hotel in Columbus. As they walked down the steps into the office a drummer standing near said, "There goes Corbett!" Instantly there was a furore and another drummer standing near asked, "Who is the little man with him?"—From "The Fighting Man," by William A. Brady.

The first steel pens were sold for about 40 cents each.
