

What to do

Civil Defense thorny issue at budget time

By Ila S. Grant
Bulletin Staff Writer
What to do about Civil Defense is a controversial issue, especially at budget time.

Water containers were also included in the shipment, James said, but these will not be used in the buildings, because Bend's water supply is from a covered source, and would be safe from radiation.

The Civil Defense program is a complicated intermingling of county, state and federal financing, and properties whose title rests with one or a combination of the concerned departments of government.

James said that two more $45,000 mobile hospitals are available from the federal government, and can be stored at the Brooks-Scanlon plant, where one is already under cover ready to be assembled.

James told the board that all receipts and expenditures are on file at the county clerk's office. John Stenkamp told James that he didn't want to dig them out himself; he expects James to do it.

Roof cover for one hospital is available at Brooks-Scanlon, he said, and the units can be moved without being decontaminated. The main use of the hospitals would be in non-fallout conditions following a war-caused emergency in another area, or in cases of natural disasters, James said.

James told the board that the first shelter supplies for Deschutes county were received Tuesday. A 14-day supply of dry rations for 1500 people, plus minimal medical and sanitation supplies, and radiological monitoring equipment, have been stockpiled at the four marked shelters.

Asked by Stenkamp if his program is coordinated through the National Guard, the welfare and health departments, reserve units and other concerned groups, James said that not all such heads have been together at any one time. It is true that the National Guard, answerable to the governor, could refuse to cooperate, he said.

13 trips made by ambulance

PRINEVILLE — Prineville's volunteer ambulance corps made 13 trips during May according to the chief, Ted Adamson. Of these trips, two were to Redmond and one to Portland, giving the volunteer drivers and assistants a total of 52 hours given to the service.

These figures are published once a month. To be published in late May are the treasury receipts and expenditures for the period ended April 30. Considering the level of spending as of last March 31, it is obvious that government spending in this fiscal year already has exceeded $100 billion but that the official figures will not show it until publication of the next monthly account.

The volunteer fire department answered five alarms of which two were in the city, Adamson reported. All fires were controlled by use of booster lines only.

James said that an additional telephone line, which has so far over-expended the $100 budget allowance for telephone service by $25, was necessary during the Cuban crisis, and also during the Columbus Day storm. During the Cuban crisis, he said, there was a definite, but orderly, movement away from large cities. Many of the calls were from people who just wanted "someone to talk to."

Accidents take lives of four

Four more Oregonians have died as the result of traffic accidents.

Stenkamp asked, "Why should we start at the bottom, when the whole thing isn't coordinated at the top?"

Two of the victims died in separate Oregon collisions Thursday, raising the state's 1963 toll to 172, which is 30 more than on the same date last year, according to the Traffic Safety Division in Salem.

James has asked for a $300 increase, to $2,800, of the portion of his salary provided by the county. The salary is matched by federal funds. He also receives $300 from the City of Bend, which is also matched, for a total of $5,400.

Mrs. Delores Davis, 35, Dallas, was injured fatally in a collision near Dallas on State Highway 223, and James Brestel, 31, Lake Oswego, was killed in a two-car accident near Portland.

Also matched from federal funds are the county's $650 for travel, $200 for office supplies and $250 for office equipment. The county's share of the office equipment item this year has been over-expended by $105, and the $700 item for radio equipment and repair by $74.04.

Lester W. Fawber, 54, Lakeview, was killed Thursday night at Alturas, Calif., when his lumber truck struck a freight train.

James was unable to answer questions about expenditures from the matching funds, other than for salary items.

Low bid made by Van Tassel

Van Tassel Brothers of Route 1, Box 177, Redmond, were the low bidders for the pruning of approximately 4,106 forest trees in the Benham Falls area, it was announced today from the headquarters office of the Deschutes National Forest.

Music, tours enhance bank opening fest

The low bid was $1,856.20. Much interest was shown in the call for bids, with a total of 30 persons and firms obtaining invitations. A total of 18 bids were submitted.

It's the bank everybody is talking about. It opened today. Ribbon-cutting ceremonies at 10 this morning officially opened the $235,000 structure of the Bend branch of the U.S. National Bank.

The trees in the area are to be pruned to provide commercial logs for the future.

Today's festivities continue up through the early evening hours. This afternoon from 4 to 6, KPTV's Charlie LaFranchise (well known among TV connoisseurs as "Uncle Charlie"), is on hand to autograph pictures and to entertain youngsters with some new TV games.

Mercury climbs to 72 degrees

Bend enjoyed its mildest day of the year Thursday, with a temperature of 72 degrees recorded. This was the first time so far this season that the mercury reached 70 degrees.

Others participating in this morning's ceremonies were, Deschutes County Judge D. L. Penhollow, Bend Mayor E. L. Nielson, City Manager Hal Puddy, and Gordon Randall, Chamber of Commerce president.

Even milder temperatures have been forecast for this afternoon and Saturday, with a high of around 80 degrees expected.

Bend's newest bank is located on the corner of Bond Street and Oregon Avenue.

TO SHOW WORK—Students of all Bend public schools will participate in an art show this evening until 7 and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., in the Reid-Thompson auditorium. The public is invited. Pictures to be exhibited are shown by Jeff Store, back, David Westfall and Connie Spencer, first-graders at Yew Lane School.

Cooper ad-libs sock ending to television spectacular

By Rick Du Brow
UPI Staff Writer
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The quiet man, astronaut Gordon Cooper, came back from space Thursday, and ad-libbed a sock ending to a sagging day-and-a-half-long television spectacular.

Thus, after Wednesday's blast-off, there was little visual action to keep the networks' notable coverage from sagging at time. Yet, almost accidentally, from their scattered views of Cooper's character, there incredibly grew a 34-hour legend: A fascinating build-up, by his background and words from space, of a remarkable human being. The least outwardly sophisticated and glib of the astronauts we have seen in action, he yet became immense in stature, hour by hour, as an utter perfectionist at his job, who could sleep more than seven hours in space and possessed stunningly unaffected self-confidence.

Today or tomorrow or next day, perhaps, Kennedy will set up a spending record that should stand for some time. Soon, anyway, the Kennedy Administration can report it has spent more than $100 billion in the first 10 months of the current '63 fiscal year.

But Thursday, the sudden drama plus the image of laconic confidence built up by Cooper in his 34 hours aloft made it impossible to turn away from the home set, even though all one got was a photograph of the recovery ship and the voice of pool reporter Joe Campbell.

Things had been perfect thus far. Everyone on the air assured us there wasn't much danger now, but it smacked a little of the old saying that a minor operation is an operation on someone else. Then Campbell, who was excellent despite sound trouble, announced jubilantly that Cooper's capsule all at once was in view to the naked eye as it descended from the sky, swinging underneath its parachute. "When he first broke through the clouds," he added, "a mighty cheer went up" on the recovery ship, the aircraft carrier USS Kearsarge.

It was genuinely pulsating, all right. Yet at the same time Campbell's admirable word painting also was a reminder of the magnificence that live coverage is not yet able to bring us pictorially.

Good skiing is forecast

It looks like good skiing at Bachelor Butte this weekend. This was the information received from Cliff Blann, ski area manager, this morning as brilliant sunshine continued in Central Oregon.

Sun glasses and suntan lotion are prescribed as part of the uniform for the day. Blann reported from the high, cloud free cone that faces the Three Sisters. The temperature at Bachelor Butte this morning at 8 o'clock was 42 degrees. The snow was granular, of the spring type.

A total of 115 inches of snow covers the old volcanic cone. All facilities at Bachelor Butte will operate over the weekend. Blann cautioned that motorists driving to the high country watch carefully for chock holes. The road is badly pitted.

Theft of five radios reported

Five transistor radios with a total value of $216.75 were discovered missing Thursday from the Sears order office, 845 Wall. Manager Beryl M. Perry said the radios must have been taken sometime during the past week. Four were missing from a display shelf and the fifth from the front of the credit office.

Police also were notified by L. H. Duncan, of Duncan Bros. warehouse, that he is missing a saw, three power drills and a cutting torch, result of a burglary of the premises last Friday night. At that time Duncan was unable to discover anything missing.

East, Paulina ice breaks up

Ice is rapidly breaking on East and Paulina lakes and if the present warm weather continues, both of the Newberry Crater lakes will be open when the high lake season opens on May 25, a week from tomorrow.

The road into the crater from U.S. Highway 97 north of LaPine will be open. As of yesterday, when an egg-taking crew from Fall River went into the crater, ice on Paulina Lake was well broken up, but was still prevalent. Oregon State Game Commission personnel here reported. East Lake was still about half frozen over Thursday.
