Japanese firm files action

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A Japanese shipping company filed a $400,000 suit against the U. S. government Wednesday in connection with a collision involving the freighter Kokoku Maru and an American military refrigerator ship.

The suit, filed in federal court by Kawasaki Kisen Kaisha line, charged negligence on the part of the American vessel, the Military Sea Transport Service ship Asterion.

A spokesman for the U. S. Justice Department said a counter suit against the Kokoku Maru's owners would be filed in U. S. District Court in San Francisco today.

The Japanese company charged the Asterion was going at moderate speed when the collision occurred Tuesday night in heavy fog about 35 miles northwest of San Francisco.

The collision resulted in the death of one of the crewmen aboard the Kokoku Maru. The 43 other men abandoned their crippled vessel in the rough, foggy ocean whipped by 40 knot winds. They later were picked up.

The 7,771-ton Asterion, which carried a crew of 54, suffered a smashed bow. It proceeded into San Francisco under its own power.

The 6,225-ton Kokoku Maru, which suffered a gaping hole 30 feet wide and 45 feet high directly amidships, was taken in tow by two commercial tug boats and brought into San Francisco.
