

NEEDS DIRECTIONS—Six-year-old Michael David Hawes waits patiently for opening of tourist information center located on the Allan School playground. Attractive center, to be operated by Mrs. Ruth Groth, should be ready for motoring visitors within the week. The pre-fabricated building was constructed last year by Leico, and will be stocked with literature provided by the Chamber of Commerce office. Young Michael is the son of Mrs. Donna Hawes, 343 E. Greenwood.

River runners midway on their trip down John Day

By Phil F. Brogan
Bulletin Staff Writer

CLARNO — Sierra Club river runners, a group of 32 in three kayaks and two rubber rafts, were well down the John Day gorge today, about midway on a 105-mile trip that will take them to the Columbia River.

The big party of river runners placed floats in the John Day Monday morning, and were joined on the first few miles of the trip by Charles Kendall, Hermiston high school teacher and press photographer, and Ros bin Idris, American Field Service student from Malaya.

Jack Stelver, mayor of Fossil, and Mr. and Mrs. Don Culver of Service Creek Junction, gave river runners a sendoff as the floats moved down the brown river, where craggy rocks reach to timbered heights. Judy Culver rode on one of the big rafts as far downstream as Twickenham.

Rafts used by the river runners are 22 by 14 feet, each controlled by a tan horsepower outboard motor. A skiff lashed into the middle of 12 neoprene rubber tubes serves as the support for the outboard motor on each raft. All food and gear are in water-tight boxes on a plywood deck. Leading the river expedition is Lou Elliott, of Berkeley, Calif. He runs rivers for the Sierra Club of San Francisco, "mostly for fun," he said, but also to provide jobs for his teenage daughter, a cook, his son and a guide.

Elliott's next trip will be down the Alagash River in Maine, in July. Dick Groesbeck, Beaverton, is responsible for one raft being used on the John Day run, and Elliott guides the other. All in the party except Groesbeck are from California. Their ages range from 12 to 68. Non-swimmers wear life jackets.

Some rapids are being faced. The river is high, for the season. Stops are being made to explore Indian caves in basalt palisades looming over the gorge. There was also a stop at Clarno, for a side trip into the Camp Hancock fossil area.

Most of the trip is through inaccessible stretches, where canyon walls are steep.

350 youngsters register for music program

Some 350 youngsters have registered for the summer school instrumental music classes to be held under auspices of the Bend School District, it was announced today by Norman K. Whitney, director of music in the local school system.

He said registration for the convenience of those unable to sign up earlier will be held on Friday, June 14, from 9 a.m. until noon, in the Junior High School band room.

The school, for instrumental and music classes, will open on Monday, June 17, at 8 a.m., in the Junior High School. Classes will run through August 8.

Judge called to active duty

Circuit Judge Robert H. Foley has been called for two weeks of active duty at the Judge Advocate School, Charlottesville, Va. He is a lieutenant colonel in the Judge Advocate General's Corps, of the U.S. Army Reserves.

Judge Foley is scheduled to be in Virginia July 29-August 12. He will be taking a course in international law.

This is the third year in a row that the Bend man has been selected for the school, considered an outstanding honor.

In his absence, District Judge Joe Thalhofer will handle cases in circuit court for Deschutes County.

Man critical after shooting

PORTLAND (UPI) — Henry Brown, 53, a veteran Portland policeman, was in critical condition from gunshot wounds today and his wife, Irene, was being held on a charge of assault with intent to kill.

Multnomah County deputies said Brown was shot at close range with a .25 caliber automatic pistol at his home just southeast of the city limits. He was hit twice in the abdomen and once in the shoulder, deputies said.

Deputies said the shooting apparently followed a family argument.

Mrs. Hatfield to miss show

SALEM (UPI)—Mrs. Mark Hatfield will miss the Portland Rose Festival this year because of a recurrence of eye trouble, Travis Cross, the governor's press secretary, said today.

Mrs. Hatfield, who has previously suffered from a cornea breakdown, was treated in Los Angeles Tuesday morning before she and the governor returned to Oregon from a Southern California visit.

Crook County schools now fully standard

Special to The Bulletin
PRINEVILLE — All Crook county schools have now been declared to be fully standard, according to a letter received by Cecil M. Sly, Crook county school superintendent, from the state department of education.

Sly read the commendatory letter, written by D. D. Williams, assistant state superintendent of schools, at the monthly meeting of the county school board, June 10. The session was also Sly's final official meeting with the board, prior to his retirement, June 30.

Williams letter stated: "The state department of education has enjoyed the privilege of working with you for the past 18 years. The development of the schools in Crook county, organized under a county administrative unit, indicated that the educational growth experienced in the district has been most healthy."

"For this reason, it is appropriate to point out that the competence and initiative of you and your staff have been the primary reason for the tremendous advancement of the district during your tenure as superintendent of the district.

"Because of the recent visit made to the Ochoco and Crooked River elementary and new junior high schools by state department personnel, the schools of Crook County are now recorded by the state department of education as fully standard. It is my pleasure to commend you, the school board and the community."

The bill approved by the subcommittee was an amended version of legislation introduced by Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., chairman of the Senate Interior Committee.

This legislation is designed to pave the way for construction of extra-high voltage transmission lines to carry surplus power from Columbia River dams as far south as Los Angeles. It is intended to allay fears that power needed for industry in the Pacific Northwest would be drained away for use by public agencies in California.

Under existing federal laws, public agencies in California would have preference over private industry to firm power in the Bonneville Power Administration system if an interstate were built. The bill was amended to direct Udall to seek agreement on non-federal proposals to build two long-range transmission lines. The Interior Department is seeking an appropriation of $25.5 million to begin federal construction of the lines.

However, Udall has told Congress that the department already is considering private proposals for construction of the interstate. He said the appropriation was needed to strengthen the department's hand in negotiations for private construction of all or part of the transmission lines.

Cars collide, no one injured

No injuries and only moderate damage resulted from a two-car accident Tuesday afternoon on Lafayette near E. Third.

Operating the vehicles were Della Jane Stills, 1017 Harmon Boulevard, and Eva Dobson Gassner, Route 1, Box 514.

Police said the Stills car was backing out of a driveway when it made contact with the west-bound Gassner car.

At least one member of SIAC expected to quit commission

SALEM (UPI)—The resignation of at least one State Industrial Accident Commission member appeared imminent today.

Travis Cross, Gov. Mark Hatfield's press secretary, said "the governor's office will neither confirm nor deny the rumor that two industrial accident commissioners are in disfavor." The commission has three members.

Commission Chairman Sidney B. Lewis told UPI: "I have no remarks to make right now, but I might later. You might expect something later today or tomorrow."

Commissioner Emily P. Logan said flatly: "I am not resigning. There have been rumors since last November, but I am not resigning."

Commissioner William A. Callahan said: "I do not expect to resign, nor to be asked to resign. I'd suggest you keep your eyes and ears open, however."

Rumors of pending resignations swept the Capitol Building.

Bills Mentioned
There was speculation that the rumors stemmed from the recent legislative hassle over a workmen's compensation bill.

During the session a special bill was introduced which would have terminated the terms of all three accident commissioners, to allow the governor to reappoint whom-ever he chose.

When that bill was killed in the House, the same wording was included in an amendment to the proposed new workmen's compensation law, which also died in the House.

During the session, lawmakers said publicly there was friction between commissioners Lewis and Logan and the governor's office.

Court affirms Foley ruling

The Oregon Supreme Court has affirmed a Crook County circuit court ruling of Judge Robert H. Foley, which granted quiet title to a ranch to Vivian Parrish. Her deceased husband had been given a deed to the property by his father, Charles E. Parrish.

The father claimed he acquired title to the property by adverse possession, and contested the trial court ruling. He had testified at the court trial that he had given the ranch to his son, but that the son ran it for awhile, then left the elder Parrish to operate it.

Parrish said in court that he had given the son the ranch with no strings attached, but that there had been conversation between them, relative to the son deeding the property back to the father. This had never been done.

The high court found that Parrish had a life estate in the ranch, but had failed to establish adverse possession.

The ruling establishes Mrs. Parrish's claim as legal heir, with her children next in line.
