Mountain folk find teenagers unbearable, burn down 'camp'

ROSMAN, N.C. (UPI) — Mountain folk stewed for days about the strange camp where, it was said, people wore no clothes, worshipped no god and never got a haircut.

The teen-aged campers "have long hair and sexy clothes and sometimes they wear no clothes at all," one mountaineer grumbled.

Some said free love was being taught at the camp, and others reported seeing youngsters swimming naked in a lake.

Last week the mountaineers got so disgruntled they sent a council of six citizens out to the camp and got assurances that the campers would stay away from Rosman.

But then some of the campers came into town, and word got around that there were Negroes at the camp, called Summerlane.

This, officials said today, was the last straw for the local folk. About 400 mountaineers went into the camp, burned down the gymnasium, threw gasoline on the lake which was reported used for nude bathing and set it afire, and rioted for nearly five hours.

No Arrests

The fracas started Thursday night and ended about 3 a.m. Friday. Gunfire shattered the window of a bus, abandoned by the campers. One man was stabbed but was not seriously injured. There were no arrests.

In New York, a spokesman for the campers, Skip Weatherford, said that when the townsfolk stormed the camp "the Rev. George Van Hilsheimer and 15 other male and female counselors had protected and calmed the 55 children."

The children ranged in age from infants to 16-year-olds.

One of the counselors, Bruce Grund of New York, said "I can't understand why the people are so incensed. We have done nothing to provoke the townspeople."

Campers Get Out

But the campers didn't stay to argue. They piled into cars Friday and said they were going to an integrated camp in Wanaque, N.J., called Midvale. Officials said their cars bore license tags from as far away as Mexico and Oregon. The group was expected to arrive in Midvale Sunday night.

Weatherford, 30, who works for a private agency called mobilization for youth, which helps train and employ high school drop-outs, scoffed at allegations of immorality at the camp.

"It's just ridiculous," he said. "I don't even know what to say about charges like that."

Local officials and citizens described the youngsters as "beatniks," shabbily dressed and in need of haircuts.
