Roberts' hit robs Peters of no-hitter

CHICAGO (UPI) - Add the names of Gary Peters to the short list of lefthanded pitchers who have tamed Baltimore Oriole batters this season.

Peters, a 26-year-old who is still classified as a rookie despite three trips to the majors, shut out the Orioles on one hit Mon-day night-Robin Roberts' sharp single to centerfield in the third Peters was the fifth lefthander to beat the Orioles out of the 25 who have tried this season. Others were Whitey Ford, Jim Kaat, Marshall Bridges and Steve Hamilton. Only two lefthanders have gone the distance against the Orioles.

"I'm one player who's in favor of winter ball," Peters said after the game. "I believe the reason I haven't been able to stay up with the Sox before was because my fast ball just wasn't fast

Peters said he cured that fault during the past winter in Puerto

"I went down there with the notion to rear back and throw hard. That's what I've been doing this season, which, so far, is my est," Peters said.

"This was easily my best game in the majors," he said. Peters threw a no-hitter with the Indianapolis Indians, a White Sox farm team, in 1960, and a onehitter with the same club against Louisville last season.

Peters confined his pitches to fast balls and sliders, rarely tossing a curve at the Orioles.
"The fast ball was excellent the slider was sharp and catch-ing the corners and the curve was just okay," Peters said.

The Angels took one game out of three from the New York Yankees and did the same against the second place Boston Red Sox. But tonight they open a three-game series against the sixth place Cleveland Indians.

"We played good ball yester-day," Rigney commented after his club dropped a 2-1 decision in the rubber game of the series to Boston, "You couldn't ask a guy to pitch much better than Don Lee did."

But the loss still went down as Angeles' 12th defeat in 14 games while Boston rolled to its fifth victory in seven games to gain a game on the league-leading New York Yankees who now are 51/2 games in front.

And for tonight's opener against Cleveland, the Angels called on Ken McBride, 9-7 who won six straight games in June only lose to the Yankees last week for his first defeat since May 28. Opposing him will be Jim (Mudcat) Grant, 6-8.

The Red Sox sent their top hurler, Bill Monbouquette, against the Angels Monday in the daylight contest but he still needed to be saved by Boston's ace reliefer Dick Radatz, to come through with his 13th victory.

For Radatz it was his 37th relief appearance and the seventi game he have saved in addition to his 10-1 won and lost record. Radatz came in when Monbouquette put two men on base is the eighth with one out and Leon Wagner coming to the plate to pinch hit for Lee.
