

Picture taking now regarded as one of four basic motivations

By Dick West
UPI Staff Writer
BIRD-IN-HAND, Pa. (UPI) — Picture taking has come to be regarded as one of mankind's four fundamental motivations, ranking just behind eating, sleeping and sex.

In some precincts, it has forged ahead of sex.

The snapshot urge shows up most strongly in the American tourist, who can be instantly identified by the camera that dangles from a strap around his neck.

The camera is his badge, his escutcheon, his caste mark, his elk's tooth, his security symbol. He feels it is a part of him, and eventually it will be.

It is only a question of time until the process of evolution incorporates this function into the bodily mechanism and each person will be born with a camera growing out of his chest.

I cultivated an interest in the anthropological aspects of amateur photography during many years of observing tourists in Washington, D.C., where I work.

The tourists there are fond of standing in the middle of the street to snap pictures of monuments and such. In driving to the capital each morning, I usually arrived with at least one tourist draped over a front fender. The bag limit is four.

It was my interest in the subject that brought me to Bird-in-Hand. This village in the heart of the Pennsylvania Dutch country is the scene of an interesting conflict between the tourist and the Amish.

The Amish are one of the groups of "Plain People" that inhabit Lancaster County. For religious reasons they still use the horse-and-buggy, wear old-fashioned clothes, shun telephones and electricity, and otherwise try to keep their homes insulated from the outside world.

All of this naturally has made them a prime tourist attraction.

Being gentle, passive people, the Amish have refrained from driving away the tourist with buckshot, as they might be justified in doing. Insofar as possible, they try to ignore the invasion.

It is, however, against their religion to permit themselves to be photographed, and a tourist with a camera is not easily ignored.

Thus has been created the classic case of an irresistible force (tourist with camera) confronted with an irresistible subject (the picturesque Amish).

I would like to report that the tourist has at last met his match and is being compelled to retire from the field with shutter un-snapped and film unexposed.

But the Amish are vulnerable to long-range lens and there are signs that camera shyness is abating in the younger generation.

As they say in Latin, "E pluribus Kodak."

It is only a question of time until the process of evolution incorporates this function into the bodily mechanism and each person will be born with a camera growing out of his chest.

Idaho firm gets contract

ASTORIA (UPI)—A temporary mining permit will be issued to Bunker Hill Co. of Kellogg, Idaho for prospective operations on Clatsop Plains.

The Clatsop County Court said Thursday it would be willing to issue the permit pending negotiations of mining leases for which the company has applied.

Bunker Hill, one of the leading mining companies in the United States, last week applied for leases on 4,000 acres of federally-owned shoreline on the Clatsop Plains north of Camp Rilea and south of the Columbia River jetty. The company wants to find out if there is enough iron ore in the sands to justify a long-term mining operation.

Albacore sighted in NW waters

ASTORIA (UPI)—The federal research boat John N. Cobb reported the first 1963 sightings of albacore tuna in Northwest waters Wednesday.

The information was radioed to the Oregon Fish Commission laboratory here.

The Cobb left Seattle July 8 on a three weeks cruise of coastal waters to search for tuna.

Albacore normally appear in Northwest waters starting in mid-July and remain through October.

LIKED TO WATCH FIRES
OGOSE, Japan (UPI) — Police here blame a five-month-long series of forest fires on a 43-year-old Buddhist priest who threw flaming paper balls into the woods from his motorcycle while on his parish rounds because he liked to watch the trees burning.

Fathers should get more of child-raising advice

By David Nydyk
UPI Staff Writer

Much advice concerned with helping children is aimed at the mother, but the father's interest and participation in a child's growth is particularly important.

A father's involvement in child rearing most often is affected by his occupation. His working hours, need for travel and type of position are all factors controlling his availability. These situations should not relieve him of responsibility or limit the value of his participation.

It is difficult sometimes for a father to come home after a busy day and exhibit a pleasant, relaxed attitude toward an active child. It is important that it be done. A plan probably can be arranged so that father can rest a short while and then spend time with his child. Surely week-ends should include activities with the youngster.

Problems Vary
These types of problems are individual and naturally vary with different families. The difficulties must be worked out using good judgment and the understanding that a family needs a father.

Let's take a look at the actual role of a father. He is traditionally the head of the household. His approach can be democratic. A balanced approach using discussion and explanations, and firm decisions when necessary, is basically most practical and successful.

All too often the father becomes a discipline figure. The mother tells the child that his father will punish him when he arrives home. Sometimes the father encourages this himself. The child should not be led to believe that his father is to be feared. The child should know that both parents agree and are consistent.

Many children look to their fathers as an idol. When young they often want to be in the same occupation. A father gets much pleasure from this. Many children actually do follow their father's footsteps even as they grow into adulthood.

Firm When Needed
A father can be many things to many different children. He should try to spend available time being a friend and guide. He should be warm, affectionate, and firm when needed.

Perhaps one of his most important responsibilities is to be a consultant both to the child and mother. His judgment should be sought. When both parents work closely together discussing plans and problems, the results are usually satisfying to all. The child receives more consistent treatment and gains a greater feeling for the family unit.

There is little doubt that a father's role is important to the growth of a child. The father-child relationship should be one of mutual respect and confidence. His involvement whenever possible is a must. Both the child and father will find a great deal of pleasure and satisfaction with each other.

Prisoner must wait

PORTLAND (UPI)—An Oregon State Prison inmate who wants to renounce his U.S. citizenship and live in Communist East Germany will have to wait six more years, according to a federal court ruling.

Stephen Michael Kessler's petition to renounce his citizenship was denied Thursday by Federal Judge Gus J. Solomon, who ruled there are only two ways to renounce citizenship.

Judge Solomon said that one of the ways is only applicable in time of war, and the other must be carried out before a U.S. officer in a foreign country.

Kessler, who is completing the first year of a seven-year prison sentence imposed for bad conduct in a federal hospital, claims his rights have been "unlawfully and willfully" abused.

The 22-year-old said in his petition that upon release from the Oregon penitentiary he intends to swear allegiance to the Communist country and, if necessary, "fight to the death" for it.

Eddie Fisher to marry again?

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI)—Singer Eddie Fisher, estranged husband of actress Elizabeth Taylor, has denied rumors he plans to marry New York model Renata Boeck.

"I don't know what my plans are," said Fisher Wednesday when asked about the rumors.

"We are good friends. She's visiting here in Las Vegas," added the singer.

Asked about his marriage to Miss Taylor, now romantically involved with Welsh actor Richard Burton, Fisher replied:

"There have always been divorce plans. As far as anything further than that is concerned, one thing at a time."

Special session per diem ruling
SALEM (UPI)—Should a special session of the Oregon Legislature be called, lawmakers would be entitled to $20 a day in expense money, Atty. Gen. Robert Y. Thornton ruled Wednesday.

A legislative pay law passed this year limits expense payments to 120 days during a session. Thornton ruled, however, that a special session would be a new session, not a continuation of the earlier one.

Three American soldiers killed in Red ambush

SAIGON (UPI)—Three American soldiers, two of them officers, were killed early Thursday in a Communist guerrilla ambush near Loc Ninh, 75 miles northwest of Saigon, a U.S. military spokesman said.

The spokesman said the victims were a sergeant and two captains, all members of the U.S. Special Force in South Viet Nam.

The new deaths raised to 98 the number of American military personnel killed in South Viet Nam.

The spokesman said that three Vietnamese special forces men traveling with the Americans were wounded in the ambush. One of them was said to be in critical condition.

The spokesman said the men were driving along a road in Binh Long Province near the Cambodian border in a small convoy of two jeeps and a 2 1/2 ton truck carrying medical supplies when Communist Viet Cong guerrillas sprang an ambush from a jungle cover along the road.

The spokesman said escort troops riding in the truck behind the jeeps opened fire and drove the guerrillas from the ambush site.

The area of the ambush is a favorite zone of operations for Communist guerrillas who can stage hit-and-run raids and then flee across the border into Cambodia.

The spokesman said the Americans killed in the ambush apparently belonged to a special forces team training and arming peasants in the area as a counter-guerrilla force.

Only Tuesday Communist Viet Cong troops wounded 14 U.S. soldiers of a special forces unit in a mortar attack on a camp south of Saigon.
