By United Press International
The 200-member Timber Operators Council resumed bargaining sessions with lumber unions today in Portland even as picket lines were thrown up around the operations of one of its members, the Edward Hines Lumber Co.

Pickets from the Lumber and Sawmill Union (LSW) and the International Woodworkers of America (IWA) appeared at Hines operations at Westfir and Dee, near Hood River, at 6 a.m. The company's big operation at the town of Hines, near Burns, remained open.

The company said 420 employees in a plywood plant, a sawmill and woods crew were idled at Westfir. The IWA represents the logging crews and sawmill workers and the LSW represents the plywood workers.

In addition, a spokesman said pickets across logging roads kept a number of logging contractors and "gyppo" haulers from working.

IWA Hits Dee Plants
The sawmill, woods operations and hardboard plant at Dee halted work when pickets from the IWA appeared. About 60 gyppo loggers and 193 regular employees were affected. Supervisory personnel were preparing to make some shipments.

Both shutdowns were orderly. Herman Gerhardt, general manager of the mill and lumber products factory at Hines, said those plants expected to remain in operation until at least this weekend. The company employs 850 to 900 men at Hines and at a subsidiary operation at Bates.

Gerhardt said the presidents of the LSW local in those areas were in Portland today for a meeting with other union officials, and another meeting was scheduled at Burns Saturday.

Pope and Talbot Next
The Northwest lumber strike will spread to Pope and Talbot, Inc., plants at Oakridge, Tacoma and Kalama, Wash., according to IWA regional president Harvey Nelson.

Strikes against those two firms would idle about 2,000 men, bringing the number out of work in the Northwest lumber contract dispute to more than 27,000.

Meanwhile, union negotiators met in Portland with officials of the Timber Operators Council of which both Hines and Pope and Talbot are members. Federal mediators LeRoy Smith and George Walker were scheduled to take part.

Another meeting, this one between the IWA and Scott Paper Co. Wednesday was recessed until Monday in Portland. Nelson reported some progress but would not go into details. The IWA represents about 400 loggers and boom men who supply logs to Scott plants at Everett and Anacortes, Wash.

Spectacular range blaze prompts Prineville meeting

Special to The Bulletin
PRINEVILLE — A meeting between fire control officers of various agencies with Prineville offices and private ranchers whose lands were involved in a 300-acre range fire Sunday, was held Tuesday in the Prineville office, Bureau of Land Management.

Don Robbins, district manager, BLM, conducted the meeting. He led discussion on two subjects, the responsibility of the BLM in Sunday's spectacular blaze at the edge of Prineville, and future plans for a more clearcut authority situation in the event of another range-type fire in the environs of Prineville.

All land burned over on Sunday was private land but federal BLM land was threatened.

Both BLM and State Forestry crews and equipment worked with their full locally stationed crews and equipment at the fire scene. Assistance was given by the Ochoco National Forest and Robbins was high in his praise for local citizens who volunteered their aid.

The presently vague lines of authority and responsibility in fighting fire in the ten mile radius around Prineville, where lands privately owned and federal and state protected lands intermingled, was discussed.

As a solution to the problem of responsibility in the case of fire on these lands, it was agreed that fire control chiefs from the BLM, the State Forestry office and the Prineville fire department would meet in the near future to work out a "zone" system of responsibility, while maintaining the co-operative aspect of mutual assistance.

Among those who attended the BLM - called meeting Tuesday were Mel Crawford, State Forestry supervisor for the Prineville district; Pat Wick, fire control officer, Ochoco National Forest; Ted Adamson, Prineville fire chief; Jerry Breese and Mrs. Martin Howard representing ranchers of the burned over area in last Sunday's fire; Gale Ontko, BLM fire control officer and several men from the State Forestry office.

A general agreement was reached on the proposed temporary fire zone plan.

New McKenzie bridge planned

The Oregon State Highway Commission announced today that it would let a contract later this year for a new bridge to replace Hendricks Bridge on the McKenzie Highway east of Springfield.

Forrest Cooper, state highway engineer, said the new bridge would be located just downstream from the existing structure over the McKenzie River. The present bridge is only 19 feet wide. The proposed new one will be 32 feet wide, making it completely adequate for present-day traffic on the highway.

The new bridge will be of reinforced concrete and will have a five-foot walk on one side for pedestrian traffic. The estimated cost of the structure is $650,000, including new approaches to it.

Cooper said the Highway Commission plans to let the contract on the bridge late this fall and hopes to have it open to traffic by the late fall of 1964.

Bank celebrates first birthday

Special to The Bulletin
MADRAS — Madras Branch, First National Bank of Oregon which opened here in a trailer last July, celebrated its first birthday this week in its newly completed building.

Manager John Venard said the bank's first birthday's deposits totaled $1,453,000.00 and loans were approximately double the deposit figure at $2,783,000.00. He indicated this was a particularly fine illustration of the economic growth of the area, as well as the branch.

Venard said the reverse deposit-loan ratio is an example of the advantages of a statewide branch banking system demonstrating how deposits can be siphoned from one area and loaned in other expanding areas of the state.

Reporter tells of experience with 'cyclone'

Summer wind patterns in the Bend area can do strange things, or at least that's what Bulletin reporter Web Ruble experienced yesterday at 1204 Davenport Avenue.

Without warning, a "miniature cyclone" developed on Twelfth Street near its intersection with Davenport. With a sudden, loud, rumbling ferocity it whipped down 12th, momentarily causing a vacuum that shattered a large back door window in the Ruble home.

It stopped as unannounced as it had started. Shattered glass was strewn throughout two rooms in the house and outside.

'Water ball' for firemen due Sunday

Central Oregon firemen will compete in a "water ball" here Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock with some "spectator participation" possible: They may get wet.

The water contest will be on Bond Street across from the tennis court.

This is to be a Jaycee-sponsored activity in connection with the Mirror Pond Pageant program. Co-chairmen are Bob Arndorfer and George Cook, both members of the Bend fire department and both with the U.S. Forest Service in Bend.

Taking part will be volunteer firemen from the various Central Oregon towns.

A wire, some 12 feet above the pavement, will be strung across Bond Street, and to this will be attached a shifty ball. Firemen, using streams of water, will attempt to push the ball into opponents' territory.

There will be three hoemen, one guard and one coach on each team. A half hour show is planned. It will be a free show.
