JFK's trip to Germany has brought about reappraisal

By Joseph P. Fleming
UPI Staff Writer

BERLIN (UPI) — President Kennedy's recent trip to West Germany has brought about a reappraisal of East-West relations and a questioning of old beliefs on how to achieve German reunification.

For as many years as the postwar German problem has existed the Western program to reunify the divided nation has been based on free elections.

As the Western Allies and West Germany envisaged it, both East and West Germans would cast ballots and the result would be a defeat for the Communists in the East and the reunification of East Germans with West Germans in a nation similar to the West German federal republic.

That the Communists would lose in East Germany in a free election—and lose overwhelmingly—no one doubts today any more than they doubted it 15 years ago.

Free Elections Out

But the reappraisal is based on the fact that the Soviets have not agreed to free elections and also on the belief that the Russians will not agree to them in the foreseeable future.

The lead in the questioning of old beliefs has been taken by Willy Brandt, Social Democratic mayor of West Berlin and his party's candidate for chancellor of West Germany.

Speeches on the German problem by Brandt and one of his closest associates have attracted considerable attention, comment and sparked a controversy.

Brandt and his press chief, Egon Bahr, tentatively suggested a new approach to the German problem in speeches to the Evangelical Academy in the West German city of Tutzing.

Mirror Future Campaign

They spoke there July 15, but their ideas still are being discussed, and some political observers think their views mirror what the Social Democratic party will have to say in the next West German election campaign in 1964.

Much of what they had to say was an attempt to adopt the "American strategy for peace" to the German problem. Much was an elaboration and interpretation of what Kennedy said on his trip to West Germany and West Berlin last month.

Brandt said "a solution of the German problem only is possible with the Soviet Union, not against it."

It was Bahr who spelled out the meaning of this, and there was no doubt he spoke with Brandt's approval.

Bahr said the Soviets would not simply step aside and give up East Germany as the old Western plan proposes.

"The American strategy of peace can be defined by the formula that Communist rule is not to be eradicated but is to be changed," he said.

"It is clear today that reunification is not a unique action that will be taken through an historic resolution on an historic day at an historic conference but a process with many steps and status quos. As Kennedy said, the interests of the other side have to be recognized and taken into consideration."

Bahr said there was no sense in continuing to talk about the East German regime being overthrown because the Russians will not let it be overthrown.

TIME TO THINK

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI)— A legislative committee moved Thursday to curb "quickie' divorce activity in Alabama.

The House Ways and Means Committee approved a bill requiring 30 days residence in the state as a prerequisite to divorce and prohibits divorced couples from remarrying within six months except to each other.
