Home owners get tax break

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Congressional tax writers have unanimously approved legislation designed to make home ownership one of the best hedges that an American can take against inflation.

The House Ways and Means Committee Wednesday affirmed by a 22-0 vote an earlier decision to add special benefits for home owners to the across-the-board rate reductions in income taxes President Kennedy wants enacted this year.

The provision would grant a "once in a lifetime" tax break to taxpayers who sell their homes for a profit after reaching the age of 65. The Treasury estimated that it would mean tax savings of $10 million a year to elderly homeowners.

It was one of a number of tax revisions approved by the committee as it began a final round of voting on a compromise version of Kennedy's tax-revision-and-reduction program. In day-long balloting the committee approved structural changes in tax law that would not about $655 million a year in additional income tax payments. The biggest revenue producer—denial of U.S. tax deductions for payment of state and local taxes on gasoline, cigarettes, alcohol and auto tags—accounted for $500 million of the total.

The department also said the biggest part of the job increase was in teen-agers and young adults under 24, an area which has been of prime concern to the Kennedy administration.

The Labor Department statistics showed, however, that the unemployment rate dropped only one-tenth of a per cent, from 5.7 to 5.6 per cent, meaning that 56 out of every 1,000 persons looking for a job could not find one.

The report said unemployment fell by 524,000 to 4,322,000 in line with usual July trends.

The increase in jobs was in the non-farm sector of the economy.

Rise noted in economy

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A Labor Department expert says the increase in U.S. employment during July to a record of nearly 71 million jobs shows the economy has been "rising rather stoutly over the past six months."

Gertrude Bancroft, Labor Department manpower expert, said the employment report issued Thursday was regarded as particularly significant because an increase of 524,000 jobs was recorded during a period when there normally is no change in the job total.

The department also said the biggest part of the job increase was in teen-agers and young adults under 24, an area which has been of prime concern to the Kennedy administration.

The Labor Department statistics showed, however, that the unemployment rate dropped only one-tenth of a per cent, from 5.7 to 5.6 per cent, meaning that 56 out of every 1,000 persons looking for a job could not find one.

Molalla couple found dead

MOLALLA (UPI) — The bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Tilton were found in their home here Thursday evening by Molalla Mayor Ossie Marson.

Police said the 68-year-old Tilton apparently shot his 70-year-old wife while she was preparing breakfast Wednesday morning and then turned the gun on himself.

Marson was called to the home after a friend, Al Nordblom, failed to receive an answer to his calls.

LEGISLATION OFFERED

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Three Oregon Democrats Thursday introduced legislation to take postmaster appointments out of politics.

Reps. Edith Green, Robert B. Duncan and Al Ullman called for postmasters to be appointed through the civil service merit system rather than through political patronage.

The Oregonians said their legislation would do away with "political influences" of the past and improve the morale of post office workers.

Sheriff not sure that he likes bears

PAULINE, Neb. (UPI) — Bob Anderson, the sheriff of Adams County, has captured his share of criminals, but confesses to limited experience with bears.

After his meeting Wednesday with Martha, he's not sure he cares for bears.

It's not that Martha was disagreeable. Uncooperative, maybe, but for a 400-pound black bear, she was rather friendly.

That doesn't mean the sheriff had an easy job when he set out to catch her—and get her back home.

Bob and his deputy, Jake Thiel, were alerted Wednesday morning that Martha had wandered away from the Grover Stapleman place near here. Stapleman has a string of donkeys he hauls around to stage donkey baseball games for fairs and festivals. He also kept Martha.

While Stapleman was out drumming up business Tuesday, Martha decided to wander. Anderson, Thiel and three other bear "hunters" followed tips and tracked down Martha.

They spent about two hours in the chase, during which Martha got tangled in some barbed wire and foundered for a while in a V-shaped tree trunk.

Anderson, who's pretty fair with a lasso, finally used some borrowed rope to capture her.

He and Martha were about two miles from Stapleman's place. So they began trudging down a hot, dusty road. Every now and then, perhaps because of the heat, Martha decided to sit and rest in the middle of the road.

A friendly farmer in a pickup truck finally gave them a lift the last quarter-mile.

Said the sheriff: "I've worked with horses and cattle, but never before with a bear named Martha."

New effort due to eliminate welfare chislers

SALEM (UPI)—New efforts to eliminate ineligible persons from Oregon's welfare rolls were announced Thursday by State Welfare Administrator Andrew F. Juras.

Earlier it was announced in Washington, D.C., that 5.4 per cent of the persons on Oregon Aid to Dependent Children rolls had been found to be ineligible.

The Oregon figure was identical to that of the national average found in a survey made last winter by federal officials. The survey was made public Thursday.

Juras declared the Oregon Welfare Department would go beyond minimum federal requirements, in his efforts to cut ineligible recipients from the rolls.

Federal requirements now specify a continuous review of eligibility; redetermination of eligibility for all ADC families every six months and state-by-state reviews of program administration.

Investigators Hired
State investigators are being hired to probe suspected frauds and complicated property cases where eligibility is questioned by the regular caseworker or the special reviewers.

Welfare workers will check industrial accident and unemployment compensation lists to be sure welfare recipients aren't getting money from those sources.

New efforts are being made in the state to simplify welfare standards and policies in order to cut the chance of error, Juras said.

The federal survey found that some families, even though eligible, received incorrect amounts of ADC assistance. It indicated that 61 persons received overpayments while 38 families were entitled to more money.

Deliberate fraud was indicated in less than half of the Oregon families where ineligibility was found.

She also leaves her paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Maynard Brown, Redmond; her maternal grandmother, Mrs. N. T. Cooley, Redmond; a half-sister, Judy Povey, Redmond, and a half-brother, Lance Brown, Weiser, Idaho.

Rosary services were held Tuesday evening at Hennessey Funeral Home, Spokane. Burial was in Holy Cross cemetery.

Chemical firm employs Moss

Ernest Kent Moss, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Moss, Cloverdale, recently obtained a doctor's degree in physical organic chemistry from the University of Arizona. He is now employed as a development chemist in the fibers division of the American Cyanamid Company, located in Pensacola, Fla.

Moss graduated from Redmond Union High School in 1955 and attended Central Oregon College for two years. He received a bachelor of science degree in chemistry from the University of Oregon in 1959.

Danger noted from chemical

PORTLAND (UPI)—City health officials said today that a chemical highly dangerous to humans has been sold recently in the Portland area for fumigation and to kill insects.

Methyl Bromide, a penetrating fumigant, is extremely dangerous to humans, the bureau warned today.

The fumes affect the eyes, the central nervous system and cardiovascular system, the bureau said. If the liquid comes in contact with the skin or its vapors are inhaled, severe burns occur. The city health office says it is concerned because the product may have been sold to persons who are unaware of its properties.

"It is just about as toxic as cyanide and is even more dangerous than chlorine gas," James McAllister, director of the Bureau of Health, Food and Sanitation, said today.

He added that the product has been sold in a pressurized can making it even more lethal.

The Honduran girl is sponsored by Exchange Students, Inc., of Bend. Arrangements for her training were made through J. W. Miller, its president and a SIAC representative and G. M. deBroekert, a director of Exchange Students, Inc., and regional manager for SIAC in Bend.

Hewling bound over to jury

LeRoy Richard Hewling, 19, arrested Monday on a warrant charging him with the theft of power saws, was bound over to the grand jury, at his preliminary hearing this week in district court.

Hewling, a parolee from MacLaren School for Boys, had been employed by Couch and Sabin, logging contractors, in the Crane Prairie area. State police are investigating vandalism that occurred there this past weekend.

Logging equipment of the contractors was reportedly damaged, and a hose on Brooks-Seaton fire equipment was severed. Casts were made of tire tracks in the area.

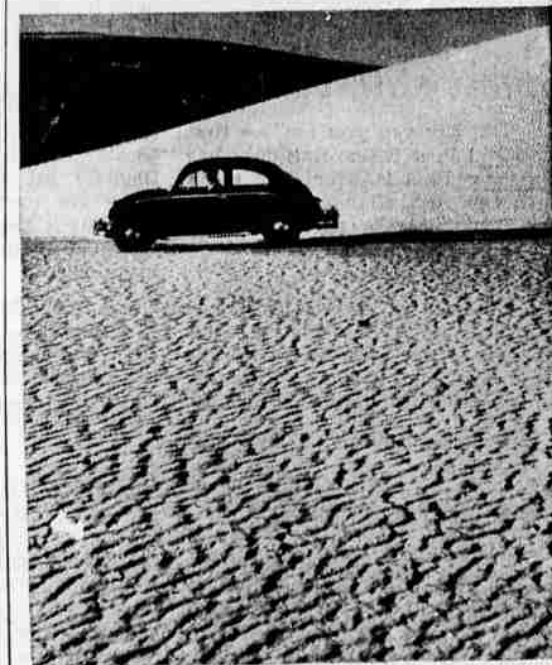

Hewling is in custody at the Deschutes county jail, awaiting preliminary hearing in circuit court.

Sand bug.

The Volkswagen is as at home in desert country as cactus.
It never needs water. (The engine's air-cooled.)
It can't boil over. (No radiator.)
It goes on sandy roads. (The engine in the rear gives it extraordinary traction.)
But the desert isn't the VW's only habitat. Put it on a mountain road and it acts like a mountain goat. Climbs up the steep places. Through snow and ice.
Wherever it goes, the VW brings with it refreshing ideas about economy.
It averages about 32 miles to the gallon. Sometimes more, sometimes less, depending on how and where you drive.
It rarely needs a major overhaul. Many VWs have gone over 60,000 miles with the original cylinders and pistons.
It lasts almost indefinitely. Most of the earliest Volkswagens are still around, digging themselves out of the sand and climbing mountains.
In fact, you might call the VW a chameleon. It adapts so well to its surroundings.
