Lead reported in search for widow's slayer

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (UPI)—Authorities in Seattle, Wash., and Canada today joined in the search for the slayer of a Santa Monica superior judge's widow. Agents of the FBI also have entered the case following disclosure Friday by local detectives of the "first good lead" they've had in the July 23 bludgeoning of Mrs. Charlotte Crawford. Mrs. Crawford, 55, widow of Judge Samuel Crawford, was killed in her home here. Police earlier revealed they were seeking Mrs. Crawford's 1963 Buick Electra sedan, missing from her home. They did not reveal, however, that her gasoline credit card also was missing. "We knew the credit card was gone and hoped whoever took it would use it," said Detective Capt. Edgar L. Hicks. The card was used recently in Seattle to buy $4.61 worth of gasoline, Hicks said. He said the suspect forged the signature of the jurist to buy the gas. The license number of the car for which the gasoline was supplied was not that of Mrs. Crawford's car. Police traced the license to a car junked in Long Beach, Calif. Detectives theorized the license plates were stolen from the Long Beach vehicle by the slayer. Police in Seattle have been supplied with both license numbers and Canadian authorities have been alerted should the slayer try to cross the border. "We might get another break soon," Hicks said.

Nursing home official says welfare evictions not new

PORTLAND (UPI)—The vice president of the Oregon Nursing Home Association said Friday that eviction of seven people on Welfare from a nursing is nothing new. Frank D. Gilman, operator of the Bid-A-Wee Nursing Home in Portland, said he has found it necessary also to have four of his own customers on welfare moved out within the past month. "More may have to go," Gilman said. Gilman's statement follows actions this week by the operators of a Monmouth nursing home to evict seven of their patients on Welfare because they couldn't afford to keep them. Gilman said he sympathized with the Monmouth operators, Mr. and Mrs. Ken E. Drachim, and added that if welfare payments are not raised, the state may have to set up nursing homes. Members of the Public Welfare Commission reacted to criticism of its nursing home policies. Clay Myers, Jr., Portland insurance executive and member of the commission, said the welfare commission operates on a "closed end" budget. "It is our job to do the best with what money we have," he added. He doubted they would ever satisfy completely either the nursing home operators or the tax payers. Other Portland nursing home operators took exception to a claim by the chairman of the welfare commission, Dr. Ensis Keizer, who said the medical needs of the patients were the commission's first concern. They listed complaints ranging from inability to hire professional help because of lack of funds, to inability to purchase all the needed medical supplies for some of the patients.

The victims were identified as Howard Comstock, 41; his wife Marjorie, 39; their daughters, Paula, 15, and Christine, 10; a son, Peter, 7, and a friend of Christine's, Mary Jo Schellhout, 9. The victims were rushed to a local hospital where they were pronounced dead on arrival. Resuscitation at the scene failed.
