Probe continues

MACKAY, Idaho (UPI)—An investigation into a light plane crash that killed four persons near here Friday night was continued today by federal and state aeronautics officials.

Killed when the craft smashed into the side of White Knob Mountain were Charles Miller, pilot of the plane and manager of the airport south of Mackay; Jim Pullen; Mrs. Bart Cook, and her daughter, Stephanie Cook, 14.

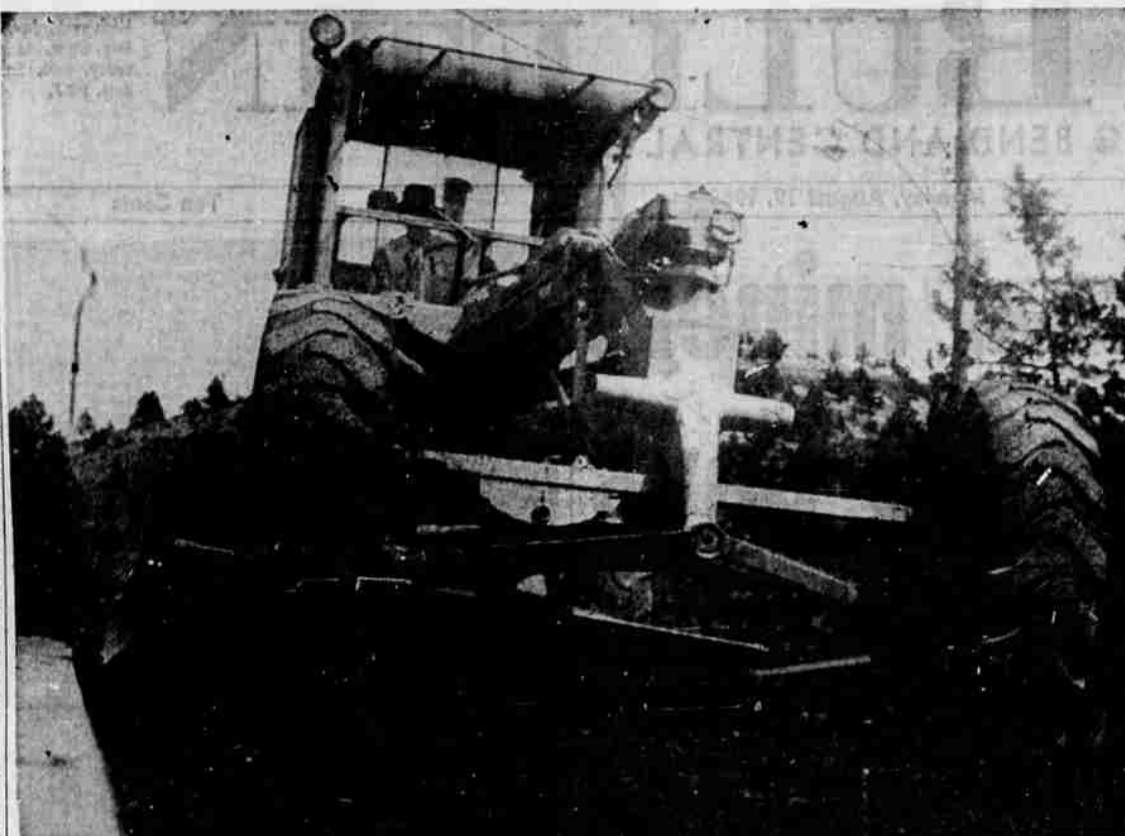

The Cooks and Pullen operated a ranch near here.

Back in shape

LA GRANDE (UPI)—Tracks were repaired Sunday on the La Grande-Joseph Union Pacific railroad line after being damaged by a ton-car derailment Saturday.

The cars, which were carrying lumber, were not damaged. It was the second derailment on the line in the past two weeks and the fourth in the La Grande area this year. Union Pacific officials said there was no apparent reason for the accident.

EQUIPMENT MOVING — The Bend City street program is again moving after a two-year standstill. East Lafayette is shown being graded for paving in the near future. Deschutes County equipment is being used for much of the excavation chores.

2 accidents cause some car damage

Two auto accidents in Bend over the weekend damaged cars but caused no injuries.

Early Sunday evening two cars collided at the E. Third Street-Greenwood intersection. They were operated by Elbert Franklin Roberts, 21, 365 E. Lafayette, and Coriella Durbin Cross, 18, of 410 E. Tenth.

Police said the collision occurred as the southbound Cross car made a left turn from Third onto Greenwood. The Roberts vehicle was heading north on Greenwood.

Both cars were moved before police arrived. An accident on Oregon Avenue at Bond Saturday morning involved Wilmetta C. Reinhart, 1051, Federa, and Louis Allen Hillis, 480 State Street.

Police said the Reinhart vehicle, traveling east on Oregon, stopped at Bond and then proceeded through the intersection where it met the northbound Hillis car. City construction equipment apparently obscured the Hillis car from Mrs. Reinhart's vision.

The Hillis vehicle reportedly suffered major damage.

Weekly disease report issued

Three communicable diseases in Deschutes County were reported last week to the Tri-County Health Department by 52 per cent of available medical sources.

Two diseases, one whooping cough and one hepatitis, were reported by 100 per cent of Jefferson County's sources.

In Crook, 50 per cent of its sources reported no communicables.

WASHINGTON, D.C. (UPI)—The Department of Agriculture's Soil Conservation Service has given its approval to start a work plan development survey for a soil conservation, irrigation and flood control project in Lane and Benton counties.

An announcement today by R. B. Robert B. Duncan, D-Ore., said that the project would be in the $3 to $4 million bracket, with about $2 million of that being provided by the federal government.

Home burglary proves costly

PORTLAND (UPI)—An estimated $7,400 in appliances, jewelry and cash was stolen in one of the most costly home burglaries here in recent years, police said Sunday.

Mary M. Barker said she discovered the burglary when she returned home after several days at the coast.

Missing were two television sets, a record player, and jewelry, plus $350 in cash.

At last . . . They're pouring City resumes street paving

By Gerald Drapesu
Bulletin Staff Writer

Cities like to progress. It's frustrating when a city finds that, for some reason, it cannot.

So it has been with Bend during a two-year stretch in which its street-paving operation was held to an absolute standstill. It was a particularly frustrating period because only about fifty per cent of its streets had paving on them.

But the long hiatus, triggered by court action two years ago, is ended. It started with a Circuit Court decision supporting the protests of Third Street property owners. They refused to finance completely a paving and widening project on their street, a state highway. It finally ended in May when the Deschutes County Court offered to ease residents' assessments by handling excavation and curbing-pouring chores and other preliminary items.

Road equipment is now moving again. Before this year is gone the first four in a lengthy list of roadways designated for paving should be finished. All that remains of the preparatory phases of work on these projects is a little cinder processing on E. Lafayette, from Seventh to Tenth Street. The other roadways — W. 11th from Newport to Quincy, E. Seward from Sixth to Eighth, and E. Kearney from Fifth to Sixth — are ready for pouring.

So far it has been all the county's show. Now, with county workmen all but finished, the city is stepping in to perform some basic miscellaneous tasks — drilling culvert trenches, pouring catch-basins, landscaping curb lines, etc. Bids for the pouring of pavement will be called on August 20 and awarded the following day.

Whichever private firm becomes low bidder, then, has seven days to start laying pavement. Probably it will finish the task — on all four roadways — in from a week to ten days. So it's a good bet that by the middle of September

Unclaimed articles will be at Harmon Hobby House Wednesday through Friday, during regular playground hours, and may be called for then.

Unions report ratification of 3-year contract

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI)—The lengthy Pacific Northwest lumber strike was a step closer to complete settlement today.

Announcement was made here Sunday afternoon that members of the International Woodworkers of America and the Lumber and Sawmill Workers' unions had ratified a three-year contract negotiated with the Big Six employers' Bargaining Association last Tuesday night.

Harvey Nelson, president of the Western States Regional Council of the IWA, made the announcement but would not disclose the actual vote. However, he said the proposed pact was approved by a "big majority."

Picket lines against two struck Big Six members plants—the U.S. Plywood Co. and St. Regis Paper Co.—were removed. Some 6,400 men were scheduled to start returning to work at the companies today.

The strike in Oregon, Washington, Northern California and Montana began when the unions struck the firms June 5.

Other members of the Big Six are Weyerhaeuser, Crown-Zellerbach, International Paper and Rayonier. They had not been struck.

Nelson said announcement of a referendum vote by union members on a contract negotiated last Thursday with the 196-member Timber Operators Council Employers' Bargaining Association would be made Aug. 27. The proposed pact is expected to be approved by a big margin.

Karl Glos, executive vice president of the TOC, said in Seattle Saturday that the wage increases included in the contracts this year would result in lumber prices being increased. He also said the competitive situation of U.S. producers would suffer in comparison to that of Canadian producers.

Glos said that the wage increases could raise lumber prices by $3 per 1,000 board feet in three years.

A strike against St. Regis at Libby, Mont., ended Saturday night when LSW members voted to accept the contract reached last Tuesday night.

The vote paved the way for an early return to work in the woods and mill operations of the J. Neils Lumber Co., a division of St. Regis. Some 1,000 men were idled by the strike at Libby.

A strike against Menasha Plywood Corp. at North Bend, Ore., also ended Sunday when members of LSW local 663 ratified a wage agreement.

Maintenance workers returned to work this morning and about 450 others are scheduled to go back to the plant and woods operations after their vacation ends Sept. 2. They had been on strike since July 31.

Still unsettled in a strike against the big U.S. Plywood plant at Anderson, Calif., where 600 men are out of work. Local issues have been blamed for holding up a settlement there.

ODEM MEDO DRIVE IN

REDMOND — The queen of the 1963 Deschutes County Fair, June Butler, Redmond, was named grand champion showman of the 4-H Horse Show held here Saturday. This show was originally scheduled as a part of the county fair program, but was postponed because of equine influenza reported from some parts of the state.

Linda Van Horn, Bend, was the reserve grand champion showman at the Saturday show, held on the fair grounds. Spectator participation was good, but entries in the various events was only about half of that expected, due to vacations and apparently the reluctance on the part of some to take their horses to a place where other animals were gathered.

Trudy Karrer, Bend, was named junior champion showman, and Martin Roberts, Redmond, reserve champion. First in the intermediate division was Gail Gassner, Bend, with reserve honors going to Jean Green, Redmond. In the senior division, Linda Van Horn was first and June Butler second.

Miss Butler also won top honors in the horsemanship division, emerging as grand champion, with Sally Van Horn taking reserve honors. Trudy Karrer was first in junior horsemanship and Tonya Garrison, second.

Sally Van Horn was named intermediate champion, and Gail Gassner, reserve champion. In the senior division, June Butler was first and Linda Van Horn second, in the horsemanship competition.

Seven of the youngsters won state fair trips in horsemanship and showmanship. They are Nancy Davis, Gail Gassner, Jean Green, Sally and Linda Van Horn, June Butler and Vivian Liston.
