

Opponents of parking plan give views at club meeting

Lions at their weekly luncheon Tuesday devoted their program to discussions of the proposed razing of three downtown buildings to make way for off-street parking facilities, with opponents of the plan provided an opportunity to present their case.

Darrell Liska and Walter Norris were the speakers. At an earlier meeting, Gordon Randall, Bend Chamber of Commerce president, outlined the Chamber's proposal to provide additional off-street parking in Bend's downtown core area.

Liska and Norris were presented as representatives of some 20 places of business that would be "displaced" if the plan to turn downtown properties into parking areas is approved. Liska said the merchants had organized primarily as a fact-finding group, and also to determine legal rights.

Liska said that it is only right that arguments on both sides of the proposal be presented, to make sure that the plan eventually adopted will be for the good of the city. The Chamber's final plan for additional parking may be suitable to all, he said.

But, Liska said, the move got off to a bad start as far as the affected merchants are concerned. He said they were not notified in advance of the release of the news of the plan. "We are vitally and rightfully concerned," Liska said, noting some of the problems the "displaced merchants" would face — loss of advertising value built up at present locations, possible increased rentals, lack of time to make plans, needs of financial assistance and cost of moving. Some of the merchants, he said will not move — they will go out of business.

It was suggested that the group move to a new community center, in a group. But, it was noted, such a new center would affect downtown business.

Glen Ratcliff, who presided for the Lions, asked Liska and Norris if their group had come up with an alternate plan to solve the downtown parking problem. Norris said shoppers and city visitors oppose meters. It was noted that if new parking space made available through building demolition is metered, the problem will not be solved.

Liska said there is need of a professional city planner to study the problem.

Student dance due tonight

A hillbilly dance is scheduled tonight for last year's seventh, eighth and ninth graders on the recreation slab in Juniper Park.

The dance is being sponsored by the City Recreation Department.

ACTION FILED

Walter E. Allison is the plaintiff in a civil suit filed in Circuit Court against Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Ranyard. The equity suit seeks to require the defendants to deliver a warranty deed for two lots in River Forest Acres, a Deschutes River development.

SCHOOL ZONE MAP — Pupils in grades one through six who live east and south of the dark line are tentatively scheduled to attend the new Bear Creek School. Note two lines at bottom of map. The zone that lies between these two lines will see fifth and sixth graders (only) going to the new school. All children living east of the far right line will attend Bear Creek School.

Tentative boundary lines reported for new school

(See also story page 1.) Now that it looks like the new Bear Creek School will be ready to go by the opening day of school, a big question is circulating. Whose children in which areas will attend the new school?

Actually, the zone boundary lines are not final. It still isn't certain. Zone lines have been tentatively set, but they are still subject to change.

Generally speaking, children on Bend's far east extreme (near Pilot Butte) will go to Bear Creek plus a sizable number from the city's southeast quarter.

Children in grades one through six that live east and south of the following described boundary are scheduled to attend Bear Creek School. The boundary runs: starting beyond the southeast city limits the line moves along the railroad tracks north to the underpass at Highway 97, thence east along a line from the underpass across the north edge of the void termed "industrial area" on city maps to Woodland Street. (This line is south of the Abbot Trailer Court.) It then moves north along Woodland to Franklin Avenue, then east on Franklin to 10th Street. The line then moves north along 10th Street all the way to Penn Street, and then west on Penn to Eighth and north on Eighth and out Butler Market Road.

In addition, fifth and sixth graders who live in the area of southeast Bend lying between the afore named railroad tracks and Highway 97 will go to Bear Creek School. This segment is within the Yew Lane school zone, but Yew Lane is for grades one through four only.

If you're still confused about the exact zone lines, see the above map. School officials said yesterday that they anticipate 240 youngsters at the new facility. The Bear Creek staff, some of them, is made up of teachers who have been transferred from other Bend schools. Only the primary teachers are what they called experienced. Others are new to the system.

Orval Boyle will be principal.

Last year he was principal at Reid-Thompson. Mrs. Tom Wimbler will teach the first grade. She moved over from Reid-Thompson. Mrs. Louis Selken will teach the second grade. She taught last year at Reid-Thompson. James Fowler will teach the third grade, and he also taught last year at Reid-Thompson.

A new person to the Bend district will teach the fourth grade. He is Arlen Hollinshead. Mrs. William Rhyner, who taught at Allen last year, will teach the fifth grade, as will a new Bend teacher or by the name of Kenneth Nivens. Nivens comes here from Albany. One of the sixth grade teachers will be David Frey, who taught last year at the junior high school. He will be joined by Odette Sikes who taught last year at Bend's St. Francis parochial.

There will be two special teachers. Mrs. Preston Waller, who taught last year at Sisters, will teach music. Mrs. Virginia Blakeley will teach physical education.
