Man's ingenuity has given new twist to old standby

By Gay Pauley
UPI Staff Writer

Behold, what man's ingenuity be- hold, what man's ingenuity hath wrought with the martini. This classic combination of gin and vermouth which has become the American businessman's standby, or downfall, at lunch now is embraced by the giant aerosol industry.

They've packaged dry ver- mouth in an aerosol container so that you can push-button the stuff in to your taste. One whoosh for the dry, dry, dry cocktail. Whoosh, whoosh for one a little less ginny. And so on, with the spray at the same time doing the stirring.

Its packagers (Barton Distilling Co., Chicago) called the aerosol containers for this dry white wine with its herbal flavor "the first real break through in liquor packaging in a generation." It said that technicians worked for three years to develop the con- tainer, and the propellant had to meet the approval of the Food and Drug Administration.

An ingenious invention also has arrived in the costume jewelry field — a ring that "stretches" to fit any size finger.

The "stretch" is in the form of the U-shaped metal shank on the under side of the finger, which slides out or back in, to enlarge, or shrink, the ring size.

The adjustable ring eliminates the sizing problem jewelers have with rings, particularly costume signs, many of them bulky looking and stone encrusted.

Now, the corn cob joins the long string of ingredients used in cosmetics.

The corn cob is made into a face powder and packaged, pressed cake style, in the conventional circular compact.

The man who created it is Earl Wright, Decatur, Ill., who has turned a $60 per ton raw material into a finished product worth $48 per pound, reports Chemical Week, a trade publication.

The publication said Wright plans to introduce other toiletries containing the product — a powder deodorant and a scented, pure powder pre-shaving treat- ment for men.

Chemical Week said that corn cob powder, "although new to cosmetics has a solid acceptance as a skin medication." It said Dr. Cleveland White, a dermatologist of the Stritch School of Medicine, Loyola University, Chi- cago, found the high absorbency of the powder useful in treating ringworm and hyperhidrosis (ex- cessive perspiring), and has pat- ented the treatment.

Wright, however, makes no medical claims for his powder, sold only through beauty shops.

The publication added that Wright's raw material source is assured — about 25 million tons of corn cob residue are piled up annually.

Sterling sets farm meeting

Special to The Bulletin
REDMOND — Deschutes County farmers have been invited to learn more about irrigated pas- ture establishment and manage- ment at a field meeting August 30 at 2 p.m. The sessions will be held on the Kenneth Huddle and Roy Burk farms, 3 1/2 miles north- east of Redmond, according to County Agent Robert Sterling.

Sterling says both Huddle and Burk have developed high yield- ing irrigated pastures through a combination of good establish- ment practices, adequate fertiliz- er programs and management of livestock for maximum pasture production.

Dr. Malcolm Johnson, superin- tendent of the Central Oregon Experiment Station, will attend and take part in the discussion.

Results of irrigation ditch sterilization for weed control can be seen at both farms.

To reach the Burk and Huddle farms, Highway 97 should be fol- lowed to Prineville Junction two miles north of Redmond. The farms lie about 1 1/2 miles east of the junction. Signs will mark the way and more detailed instruc- tions are available at the exten- sion office in Redmond.

Woods closure in Klamath area

SALEM (UPI) — Weather con- ditions have brought another woods closure in the Klamath area, the State Forestry Depart- ment announced Friday.

Effective next Thursday the 31,000-acre Bryant Mountain area southeast of Klamath Falls will be subject to entry by permit only.

A permit restricts smoking and open fires and requires fire tools under certain conditions.

Meanwhile, only three fires were reported Thursday on state- protected forest and rangelands.

One was a 20-acre wheat field fire near Tygh Valley, and the other two were small blazes in the Linn and Douglas districts.

The U.S. Forest Service had eight small fires in the state.

NO GAMBLE

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The right or wrong side of "7" has nothing to do with dice as far as the citrus grower is concerned. That figure is the dividing line between the acidity and alkalinity of juices.

When tested with the latest mea- suring devices the pH factor of the liquid — acid below 7 and al- kaline above — is determined, says Leeds Northrup Co., in- strument manufacturers. If the pH factor is right, fruit and veg- etable juices can be added and will remain palatable.

The man escaped with $838. The bandit took the taxi-cab to a drive-in window of the bank, gave a woman teller a note order- ing her to give him money and then had the driver take him to Rhodes Department Store. He then paid his fare and went into the store. Edward Calkins, 49, the driver, was not aware of the holdup until later when traced by his vehicle's number.

The man was described by Cal- kins as about 35 to 40 years of age.

A bandit took $3,871 in a similar robbery last May 20 at a branch of the Pacific National Bank in Seattle.

Miss McDonald put on probation

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Actress Marie (The Body) McDonald to- day began three years' probation for forging two prescriptions to obtain the pain-killing drug per- codan.

Superior Judge Donald R. Wright imposed sentence on Miss McDonald Friday. He also fined her $250. She pleaded guilty to the charge last July 26.

The blonde actress was accom- panied to court by San Francisco attorney Jack Ehrlich, who told the judge her physician had given her permission to sign his name to prescriptions when he was not available.

Ehrlich submitted to the court a doctor's report which said the actress was not addicted to per- codan or to any other drug. He said she had taken the drug to alleviate pain from ulcers, which caused her hospitalization in Aus- tralia earlier this year.

The actress told newsmen she had not taken percodan — an opiate derivative similar to co- deine—since she had learned it was irritating rather than helping alleviate her ulcer condition.

Miss McDonald was charged with obtaining percodan on two occasions—at an Encino, Calif., pharmacy last June 27 and at a Sherman Oaks, Calif., drug store last July 2.
