COC directors discuss problems resulting if tax bill defeated

Financial problems that may be faced by Central Oregon College if the tax-referral measure is defeated and the state reduces its support to community colleges were discussed Wednesday night at a regular meeting of the area education district board.

The board meeting was held in the Bend Senior High School Library room, with all members present with the exception of Owen M. Panner, who was out of town.

The board voted to hold future regular meetings on a rotating basis in the major communities of Central Oregon. The meetings will be rotated in alphabetical order, with Bend, Madras, Prineville and Redmond serving as hosts in that order. The October meeting will be in Madras.

The board accepted the resignation of Kessler R. Cannon, who at the July meeting was appointed to the position of instructor in speech. The board accepted the recommendation of President Don Pence to name Clay Shepard to the COC staff as assistant professor of speech, to fill the position vacated by Cannon. Shepard comes to COC from Portland State College, where he held the position of assistant professor of speech and radio and television education.

Mrs. Helenmarr Wimp, who resigned from the staff last spring, has decided to return to her position as coordinator of the practical nursing program and was reappointed by the board.

Two fulltime positions on the COC staff remain unfilled — one, a position in forestry in connection with the Manpower Development and Training Act forestry program, and the other a position as instructor in electronics technology.

Boyd Overhulse, the board's legal adviser, reviewed new statutes coming out of the last legislative session pertaining to community colleges and also discussed legal procedures relative to the college site being annexed to the City of Bend.
