ANTHONY WOLFFSOHN Studios fire control work

Visitor studies forest fire control methods

Forest protective crews in Central Oregon are most fortunate — they haven't the iguana to contend with in checking destructive fires that sweep through brush, grass and timber.

A visitor from Belize, British Honduras, Anthony Wolffsohn, forester, indicated this today as he continued his studies of fire control methods used on the Deschutes National Forest. The iguana is a large lizard, represented by a species in British Honduras that reaches a length of six feet. Its meat is appetizing — and so are its eggs.

The iguana buries its eggs in the grasslands of the country, where grass grows tall. Natives seeking the eggs and the iguanas start fires in the grass. These fires, in the arid season, sweep into forests, creating a grave fire control problem.

Despite heavy rains, ranging from 60 to 200 inches a year, forest fires cause considerable loss in British Honduras, Wolffsohn said. About 4,000 square miles of British Honduras is covered with timber, including mixed hardwoods and a species of pine, which is the main commercial stand.

Like Oregon, British Honduras also had its "big blow" — a terrific hurricane that occurred in 1961. The blowdown has created a serious fire hazard, the forester said.

With Philip Shoemaker of the Deschutes National Forest staff as his guide, Wolffsohn was back in the Deschutes National Forest today, studying management principles, fire control methods and other activities. He will be here until Friday.

Wolffsohn will return to his headquarter in Belize, British Honduras, after spending three weeks in the United States.

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Richard Boone, television's "Paladin," was back home from the hospital today, a bandage over his nose the only sign of ill effects from an auto accident last week.

Kennedy to get aerial view of Rogue project

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Kennedy will get an aerial view of the Rogue River project in Southern Oregon Friday as well as the proposed Dunes Seashore Park, Rep. Robert Duncan, D-Ore., said today.

Duncan said inclusion of the Rogue River project to the President's flight itinerary was arranged at the congressman's specific request. If the weather is favorable he will view the Lost Creek, Elk Creek and Applegate Dam sites.

Kennedy is scheduled to fly from Tacoma to Tongue Point, near Astoria, by helicopter and spend 15 minutes there early Friday afternoon. He then will return to Seattle - Tacoma airport and fly to Redding, Calif. He will get his aerial view of the Oregon projects while on the latter flight.

The President plans a brief inspection and a meeting with local officials, but no speech in the Astoria area.

Duncan said aerial inspection of the Dunes and Rogue River areas would provide Kennedy with a better perspective of the situation than he could obtain from the ground, especially in view of the limited time available. "The superior value of this type of inspection was made clear to me on my recent trip with the Senate Interior Committee's subcommittee on public lands," Duncan said. "During that trip we inspected from the air many actual and proposed recreational developments in the United States."

Support may be dwindling for fish petitions

ALBANY, Ore. (UPI) — J. Ross Brown, Albany, a member of the executive committee of the Oregon Wildlife Federation, said today support for the initiative petition to stop commercial salmon and steelhead fishing on the Columbia River may be dwindling within the federation.

He said that the Oregon Federation's executive committee met in Lebanon Sunday to discuss this and other subjects.

Brown said no official action was taken but the subject would probably be taken up at the annual meeting in January at Corvallis.

Originally, the Oregon group supported an initiative measure to combine the game and fish commissions "so that there would be a joint program of managing resources which would take out the conflict which presently exists."

This resolution was amended in June at Baker to support the Izaak Walton League in its initiative petition to halt commercial fishing in the Columbia River.

"It developed at the meeting Sunday, however, that several clubs in the state have changed their minds on this petition," Brown said.

There were representatives from Coos Bay, Roseburg, Bend, Portland, McMinnville, Armit, Salem, and Albany at the Lebanon meeting. George Reed of Baker is the federation's state president.

Gherman Titov becomes father

MOSCOW (UPI) — The wife of Soviet astronaut Gherman Titov has given birth to a daughter, the Tass news agency reported today.

The 9 pound 4 ounce girl is believed to be the world's first space baby — the only child fathered by an astronaut after he has made a space flight.

Scientific sources here said the birth would go a long way toward silencing fears that space flights might induce sterility.

Titov made Russia's second space flight, orbiting the earth more than 17 times in August, 1961. He was in space more than 25 hours.

Tass said the child was born in a Moscow maternity home. "The mother and daughter feel fine," it said.

Registration due at college

Registration for Fall Term classes at Central Oregon College will be held September 26, and 27, starting each evening at 5 p.m. in the Bend Senior High School Cafeteria, according to Charles Wacker, COC Registrar. New students are scheduled to register Thursday evening, September 26 between 5 p.m. and 10 p.m. Returning students will sign up September 27 during the same evening hours, Wacker continued.

In addition to registering, students will be provided an opportunity to confer with their advisers, and to purchase text books in the College Bookstore. Those students who so desire, will be allowed to apply for student loans, housing, or employment during the evening of registration.

An estimated increase in enrollment over last year of approximately 20 per cent is expected to swell the number of full-time equivalent students at COC to about 450, college officials report.

Classes are scheduled to begin Monday evening, September 30.

Some of our stockholders work at night

Communist workers must find it very hard to understand that an American can be an employee and also an owner of the business.

For instance: All Standard Oilers who are 35 or older, and have 5 years of service, may invest a portion of their pay in Standard shares if they wish, through monthly deposits in our Employee Stock Plan.

The Company adds a contribution, which has averaged more than $1.50 for every $1.00 deposited by employee. When a Standard Oiler retires, dividends from his accumulated stock add to his other retirement benefits.

The Employee Stock Plan is now the largest single holder of Standard Oil stock.

Yes, the husky fellows on that night drilling crew are Standard Oil stockholders. They own a piece of the Company, and share in its profits.
