Finance Committee members tutored on complexities of tax bill

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Senate Finance Committee was called into closed sessions today to be tutored by staff experts on the complexities of a 310-page tax-cutting bill.

The measure, which passed the House on a 271-155 rollcall eight days ago, would provide relief for virtually every federal taxpayer, starting Jan. 1. The relief would total $11 billion, with a one-third delayed to Jan. 1, 1965.

Despite administration hopes for speedy passage, it is doubtful that Congress will complete action this year. However, backers insist that if the bill is not enacted until next year, the first stage of the two-stage tax cut would be made retroactive to Jan. 1, 1964.

The committee's briefing sessions are expected to extend until next week. Then, Treasury Secretary Douglas Dillon will be expected to make a series of public hearings which will run for many weeks. Seventy-five witnesses already have asked to testify.

Submitted Four Amendments
Sen. Albert Gore, D-Tenn., a committee member who has joined forces with Chairman Harry F. Byrd, D-Va., to oppose speedy action on the bill, submitted four controversial amendments Wednesday and said he wanted to hear testimony on each of them.

Gore has complained that the bill would provide too much relief for taxpayers in high income brackets and not enough for those in low-income brackets.

The four amendments Gore proposed would:

- Gear the tax relief to the size of a taxpayer's family instead of to the level of his income. In lieu of across-the-board cuts in tax rates for individuals and corporations approved by the House, Gore proposed that personal tax exemptions be raised to $1,000 instead of the present $500. This would knock off the tax rolls millions of married couples with dependent children.

Repeal Certain Provisions
—Repeal provisions of the law which make it possible for corporations executives to get the benefit of low tax rates on riskless profits taken in the stock market through use of stock options. The House-passed bill would tighten rules governing stock options but Gore complained that the "preferential tax treatment" would continue.

—Levy a tax on purchase by Americans of certain foreign securities. This legislation was recommended by President Kennedy earlier this year to curb the flow of American gold abroad. It is now pending before the House Ways & Means Committee. The administration wants it considered separately because of its controversial nature.

Work under way on new mill

Special To The Bulletin
REDMOND — Utilizing three boilers and three standing stacks from the mill that burned July 31, construction has begun on the new Dite Knot all-electric pine mill in Redmond. The new mill also will feature a double-cut band facility in a 50 by 170-foot building.

It is hoped the new mill will be put into operation by Jan. 1, 1964. A harrow and chipper will be installed, and a sprinkler system if the city's bond issue passes October 14.

9 FIRES REPORTED
SALEM (UPI)—Nine fires, all man caused, were reported Wednesday on state protected forest and rangelands.

Four of the blazes were caused by careless smokers.

Largest was a 15-acre grass fire in the Douglas district. A six-acre grass blaze occurred in the Klamath district. All were put out

Fino must be misinformed, Thornton says

PORTLAND (UPI)—Oregon law enforcement officials took issue today with Rep. Paul A. Fino, R-New York, who declared the state is a "gamblers' paradise" which contributes more than $250 million a year to crime syndicates.

"He must have received some misinformation," said Atty. Gen. Robert Y. Thornton.

"We haven't had a valid gambling complaint in Portland for the past year," said Police Chief David Johnson.

Fino, who frequently points to gambling in various states, contends a government-run national lottery would drive criminals out of gambling and bring more money into the U.S. treasury.

In making his Oregon charge Wednesday, he also accused the state of hypocrisy in assigning part of the gross income from gambling at horse and dog tracks to county fairs. He said legalized gambling had not been popular in rural Oregon "until the gambling syndicates got a brainstorm."

"They cut the hypocrites in on the take," he said. "They bought off the rural bluenoses by getting the state to assign a portion of its percentage of the gross to the county fairs."

Thornton said he had "no personal knowledge" of any illegal gambling in Oregon and that he was convinced things were not as bad now as during the Portland vice probe in the mid-1950's. And, he said, the annual yearly illegal betting traffic at that time would only "amount to a small fraction of the $250 million figure."

B. C. lumber gains reported

PORTLAND (UPI)—The Pacific Lumber Inspection Bureau said today British Columbia continued to gain during August in waterborne lumber shipments as compared to last year.

The Bureau said that until the end of August, British Columbia shipped almost 1.5 billion board feet of lumber by water, a gain of 17 per cent from last year. August shipments totaled 176 million board feet, an increase of 21 per cent.

United States' shipments totaled 914 million feet by water, a gain of four per cent, during the same period. August shipments totaled 129 million board feet, compared with 115 million a year ago.

Witness says Christine vowed she would 'get' discarded lover

LOWDOWN (UPI)—A witness testified today that ex-girl Christine Keeler, in a mood she never employed to ex-War Minister John Profumo or any of her other famous friends, swore she would "get" a discarded Jamaican lover who had tried to see her again.

A capacity crowd in dingy Marylebone Magistrate's Court heard further revelations of the other side of the double life of the girl who started the Profumo scandal with tea on the stately lawns of Lord Astor's estate.

The witness, bearded West Indian Clarence Camacchio, said he was present the night of April 17-18 when Aloysius (Lucky) Gordon, a jazz singer, grappled with her at the door of her home.

"I'm going to get him," he quoted the 21-year-old redhead as saying later. "I'm not going to let him get away with this."

Miss Keeler and three co-defendants are being given a hearing in magistrate's court on charges of conspiracy and perjury in framing Gordon into a three-year jail term. His sentence was quashed by the court of criminal appeal.

The prosecution charges that Miss Keeler told police that injuries she had actually received earlier that night in a punch-and-kick battle with an ex-convict were caused by Gordon.

Her co-defendants are her apartment mate, Paula Hamilton-Marshall, 23, her housekeeper, Mrs. Olive Brooker, 56, and a

West Indian chauffeur, Rudolph Truello Fenton.

Camacchio, who is serving a term for living on the immoral earnings of his wife, said that he used to visit Miss Hamilton-Marshall and had dropped in for some food on the night in question.

Camacchio did not mention John Hamilton-Marshall, brother of Paula, who testified Wednesday that he kicked and punched Miss Keeler in a fight over her charge he had examined her private papers. One of his punches opened a cut over her eye—evidently some time before Gordon appeared on the scene.
