Tax referendum Board favors more lenient rules on horses, livestock

More lenient property regulations for Bend residents who own horses and other livestock will be in force if City Commissioners accept a Planning Commission recommendation.

Last night the planners supported an ordinance amendment which, among other things, reduces from 25,000 to 7,500 square feet the corral or pasture area in which one horse may be kept.

Draw criticism
CORVALLIS (UPI)—A spokesman for the State Bureau of Labor Monday criticized Oregon high schools for not sufficiently preparing its graduates for jobs.

Ray Ziegler spoke on the opening day of the two-day fall conference of the Oregon Association of Secondary School Principals at Oregon State University.

Ziegler told the principals that "25 per cent of your students go on to college and are well prepared but the 75 per cent who do not go to college are not adequately prepared for jobs."

"Teachers should get out and talk to the men who run their community's business and industry to find out what they want their employees to be trained in," he said.

Fire season not over—2 blazes in woods noted

Deschutes foresters had proof today that the 1963 fire season is not yet over, despite the recent showers and the present period of low fire hazard.

Two fires were reported from the Deschutes woods yesterday. Both were in the Fort Rock District timber, which tapers to the east to give way to inflammable grass and sage.

One of the blazes started from an abandoned camp fire in the Quartz Mountain area, in the Polk county. The blaze, apparently from a warming fire, spread into the grass and was making good headway when discovered.

The second fire, five miles north of China Hat, was blamed on a careless smoker. It also spread into grass.

Forecasts call for partly cloudy weather in Central Oregon through tomorrow, but with rain expected in western Oregon and light showers in the eastern part of the state.

In Bend last night, the mercury was rapidly dropping toward the freezing point in the pre-dawn hours when high clouds covered the sky. The mercury stopped its drop at 35 degrees, to make Bend one of the coolest reporting points in the region.

Missile blast being probed

VANDENBERG AFB, Calif. (UPI)—Air Force investigators today attempted to determine what caused a giant Atlas-D missile to explode shortly after it was launched from this Pacific missile range base Monday.

The big intercontinental ballistic missile exploded on a 5,000-mile mission downrange into the Pacific. An Atlas-F blew up at the same missile base during lift-off last Thursday night.

There were no injuries to base personnel or damage to ground missile installations from either explosion.

In other action, the planners named October 23 as the public hearing date for a zoning amendment to reduce the lot area requirement for apartments in C-4 zone from a 1,500 foot minimum to 1,000 feet.

Registration set Wednesday for

All junior members of 145 year's Bend Rifle Club — and all prospective members — should register for the coming winter season Wednesday night at 7 o'clock at the indoor shooting range on W. 18th and Newport.

Any boy or girl between 12 and 18 years is eligible to become an affiliated member of the Junior National Rifle Association of America. An additional advantage of club membership, says head instructor Bob Cecil, is the acquiring of a hunter-safety card which will be issued each member following a standard course of safety instruction during shooting sessions.

There will be no actual shooting Wednesday, but Cecil, assisted by instructor Dick Brandstetter, will give a brief talk on survival methods in the woods. Parents are invited to accompany their children.

A $3 registration fee should be brought by prospective members. All rifles and targets are furnished, Cecil said. Weekly shooting sessions for the basic group will be held from 7-9 p.m. each Thursday until the middle of next May.
