

Rocky carries campaign into hostile area

FRENCH LICK, Ind. (UPI) — New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller brought his presidential campaign into hostile territory today.

He invaded Indiana, one of the most pronounced anti-Rockefeller states in the union and a state which seems to be preparing to give its presidential votes at the GOP National Convention to Sen. Barry Goldwater.

Rockefeller was scheduled to deliver a nonpartisan speech at a luncheon of the Indiana State Bar Association. More political issues probably will be discussed at a news conference, however.

Rockefeller's speech Thursday night at a dinner in New York City was far from nonpartisan.

He sailed into the Kennedy administration's Latin American policy and described the Alliance for Progress program as having "all the earmarks of just another United States aid program."

Charged Administration Setbacks
Rockefeller also charged that the Western Hemisphere, under the present administration, has "suffered serious setbacks to the cause of freedom and human dignity itself."

He accused the administration of weakness in failing to uphold the Monroe Doctrine by permitting Fidel Castro and communism to become entrenched in Cuba.

Just four years ago, Rockefeller then also running for President, spoke at the University of Notre Dame in South Bend. He was greeted in 1960 by then Sen. Homer E. Capehart, state Sen. Roy Conrad of Monticello, and other Republican notables who hailed him as a winner.

Today, the Hoosier GOP bigwigs were conspicuous by their absence. Lt. Gov. Richard O. Riattine, titular head of the party, and Atty. Gen. Edwin Steers were invited by the bar association to attend but sent regrets.

GOP Faring Poorly
Actually, things haven't been going too well for the Republican party as a whole in recent years in this traditionally GOP stronghold.

Indiana now has two Democratic senators in Vance Hartke and Birch Bayh Jr., and a Democratic governor in Matthew Welsh. However, Hoosiers went for Richard M. Nixon in 1960 by 225,000 votes.

Welsh was to greet Rockefeller at the speakers' table prior to his formal introduction.

Many women were in the hotel lobby to catch a glimpse of the governor's wife, "Happy," whose marriage to Rockefeller badly deflated his presidential boom in Indiana and other states, according to the politicians.

Tax defeat might result in COC cuts

Cuts in state appropriations to Central Oregon College amounting to $290,000 could result from the defeat of Ballot Measure No. 1 in the October 15th election, Don Pence, COC president has announced. Pence said that approximately $92,000 might have to be cut from the operating budget this biennium. This figure represents a 25 per cent cut back in state support for operational purposes.

In addition, the $266,000 slated for Phase II of the campus building program would be eliminated. Phase II includes a library, classrooms, and offices. Such a curtailment could prohibit the opening of day classes next fall, Dr. Pence said. Phase I which is presently underway will not provide sufficient facilities to launch the day program which has been anticipated for 1964.

President Pence noted possible consequences of the defeat of the tax measure. He said: "The college would be forced to present to the people for approval of a budget next spring that would include approximately $92,000 over what will be necessary if Measure No. 1 is approved. This sum would amount to an additional levy of 1 1/2 mills over the present millage rate of 1.9."

In the event that the legislature were to reduce the Basic School Support Fund, the reduction in appropriations to state services would be approximately 15 per cent, rather than 25 per cent. Such a reduction would mean a less in anticipated revenues to COC of approximately $56,000 for the biennium, rather than $92,000.

Pence suggested that warrants may have to be issued to pay staff salaries and other expenses, if there is a substantial loss in operating revenues.

Pence emphasized that he is not threatening the voters, but he considers it his obligation to acquaint the public with the possible circumstances which could result from the defeat of the tax measure on October 15.

RECEIVES TREATMENT

Food poisoning victim reported 'very critical'

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — The latest victim of the rare but deadly botulism outbreak was reported in "very critical" condition today.

The patient, George Breault, 54 was placed in a respirator after the virulent food poisoning began to affect his respiratory system Thursday.

Two other persons were in "serious" condition at the University of Tennessee Hospital in Knoxville. The food poisoning, apparently stemming from packaged smoked whitefish, has claimed seven lives—five in Tennessee and two in Michigan.

Medical authorities said the supply of antitoxin should be adequate, as long as there are no new cases. They said some additional antitoxin has been located in Moscow and at the Pasteur Institute in Paris, but apparently no call has been made yet for these supplies.

There was uncertainty that all of the contaminated fish believed responsible for the outbreak has been found. Ohio health officials said Thursday there was a "distinct possibility" that some of the suspected smoked whitefish packed by the Dornbos Bros. Fisheries of Grand Haven, Mich., was sold in Ohio.

Type "E" botulism was responsible for the deaths in Kalamazoo, Mich., last Thursday of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Mitchell and the deaths Monday in Knoxville of David Cohen, 35, and his daughter Amy Beth, 10, according to the Food and Drug Administration (FDA).

The deaths had been unexplained until Cohen, vice president of a furniture company, and his daughter died within 15 minutes of each other at University Hospital Monday morning.

Prospects bright for spud crop

Special to The Bulletin
MADRAS — Possibilities for one of the best potato crops, both in terms of quality and quantity, ever raised in Jefferson County were seen this week by Amos Bierly, Jefferson county extension agent, after checking early returns from the annual harvest of the crop.

The potato harvest was just getting well underway in the county this week after a slow start last week when hot weather hampered handling of the potatoes after they were dug.

It was forecast that by next week most growers in the county, barring adverse weather conditions, would have their potato harvesting operations in full swing.

Bierly reported that a check with potato processing sheds early this week revealed deliveries were recording 70 to 80 per cent No. 1 potatoes. The high yield of high quality spuds is expected to combine with an above average yield in total tonnage to give the county a banner year in potato production.

Most potatoes harvested now are from fields that were sprayed to retard growth in September and a freeze soon would speed maturing of the rest of the crop.

Conservatives in England give pledge of U.S. unity

BLACKPOOL, England (UPI) — The ruling Conservative party, outwardly ignoring the bitter leadership struggle launched by Prime Minister Harold Macmillan's announced resignation, pledged today a foreign policy based on a strong Anglo-American alliance.

Foreign Secretary Lord Home told 4,200 delegates attending the party's annual conference that Britain must be firmly allied to power to maintain her influence in the world.

"In plain words, that meant and means keeping the United States on our side in a relationship of partnership," Home said.

"Without the closest alliance between the U.S. and Britain there is no balance of power and no security."

The foreign policy resolution proposed by Home was adopted by unanimous acclamation.

Home spoke against a background of moves and counter-moves aimed at solving the leadership problem which has split the party from top to bottom.

Deputy Prime Minister R. A. Butler, who has run the government since Macmillan entered a London hospital Tuesday night for the removal of a prostatic obstruction, apparently has the backing of many of his cabinet colleagues.

But the issue was thrown into confusion Thursday night only hours after Home told the conference Macmillan would step down. Science Minister Lord Hailsham told a cheering rally he would give up his title and seek election to the House of Commons as plain Mr. Quentin Hogg.

The move was tantamount to announcing he would seek to inherit Macmillan's mantle. Such a virtually open candidacy was unprecedented in Tory party history. In the past, party leaders have been chosen behind closed doors.

It appeared, however, that Butler was taking a lead over Hailsham. Sources said he had the firm backing of a majority of his cabinet colleagues.

One influential group favored naming a successor to Macmillan before Parliament reconvenes Oct. 24. Other sources said Macmillan may not step down until he can advise the queen about a new prime minister in person.

Doctors who removed the 69-year-old leader's prostate gland Thursday said the premier would have to remain in hospital at least three weeks and then convalesce further.

A hospital bulletin issued in London today said Macmillan "has had a comfortable night and his condition this morning is satisfactory."

Court Hurt Conservatives
Observers said Hailsham's announcement that he would seek to return to Commons could hurt the Conservatives in the general election that must take place within the next 12 months if it actually divides the party.

Speakers at the conference have repeatedly emphasized that the party must be united if it is to beat the resurgent Labor party at the polls.
