Redmond's FFA team returns from session

Special to The Bulletin
REDMOND — Redmond's state champion FFA livestock judging team arrived home Monday from national competition in Kansas City, Mo., with a silver trophy for the chapter and individual bronze awards.

The team received the silver trophy for placing within the second-place grouping, in the 10th to 20th category. Gold awards went to those who won the top 10 places.

As individual judges, the boys placed in the 20-30 grouping, for third place, receiving bronze emblems.

Members of the team were Dave Cook, Ron Dowse and Bill Jordan. Wayne Light, who attended as an alternate, received a bronze emblem for livestock holding in the showmanship division.

The boys were away from home for 10 days. They toured iron and steel mills in the Great Lakes area and the Harry S. Truman Library, and took in all phases of the American Royal Livestock Exhibition. They were accompanied on the trip by their chapter adviser, Charles Porfily. Some 11,000 boys from across the nation attended the convention.

Bend Golf Club's annual meeting due Wednesday

The annual meeting of members of Bend Golf Club will be held Wednesday evening at the clubhouse, President Charles R. Marsch announced today.

A new innovation this year has ladies invited to the evening's festivities, Marsch said. Schedule of events calls for dinner at 7 p.m., election of four new board members at 8 p.m. and the general membership meeting at 9 p.m.

Board members whose terms expire are Vern White, Jim Wood, Ted Creighton and Bill Hatch Jr. Creighton and Hatch are expected to seek re-election since they were appointed only last year to fill unexpired terms.

Most of the discussion is expected to center around plans for a new clubhouse and another nine holes. Marsch urged all members and their wives to attend the meeting.

Service noted for farmers

Special to The Bulletin
REDMOND — Forage analysis service is available to farmers of the area at the agricultural chemistry department of Oregon State University, reports County Agent Robert Sterling.

The testing service provides dairymen, cattlemen and hay raisers with information on the percentage of protein and total digestible nutrients in the grain and forages they are using or have for sale.

Standard containers, report forms and sampling instructions are available at the county extension offices in Bend and Redmond. A fee of $4.50 is charged for hay analysis and $5 for silage.

Hay samples should be taken from at least 20 bales or 20 different places in the stack, says Sterling. A hay sampling tool may be borrowed from the extension office in Redmond. All supplies are included in the cost of sampling.

Standing ovation given by Bend audience following symphony concert on Monday

By Phil F. Brogan
Bulletin Staff Writer

Maestro Jacques Singer brought his 70-piece Portland Symphony Orchestra to Bend Monday night and dynamically led the musicians through a two-hour concert that won a standing ovation from a crowd that filled the Bend Senior High School to near capacity.

The Symphony conductor, a leader of electric personality, answered the thunderous ovation with two brilliant encores.

The Symphony came to Bend on a city-city tour of Oregon that started in Pendleton Saturday and will end in Coos Bay on October 17. From Bend to day, the musicians will cross the Oregon Cascades to Roseburg.

Traveling in two Trailways buses, with $100,000 worth of varied instruments transported by truck, the musicians reached Bend late Monday afternoon, then toured the town while limbering cramped muscles. Affable Jacques "complained" that stores should not close so early. "We went down town to shop and found all stores closed," he said.

His comments were made backstage at intermission.

For the upstate tour, prior to the opening of the Symphony season in Portland, Maestro Singer programmed a tantalizingly familiar duet of classics, plus informative modern work.

His attentive audience heard the Maestro conduct his impeccably disciplined ensemble in German composer George Frederick Handel's flashing "Water Music" suite; Englishman Benjamin Britten's charming "Variations and Fugue on a theme of Purcell," and following intermission, Russian master Peter Ilich Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 4 in F minor.

Mark P. Huber, manager of the Portland Symphony, narrated the Britten composition, which set a pleasantly melodic aural picture of each instrument's orchestral role against a 17th century background theme by Henry Purcell. Dr. Singer noted that Handel's music is a "serenade" in the form of dance tunes, airs, bourees, hornpipes, and other movements introduced by an Overture. Narrator Huber first introduced the symphony en masse; then its four instrumental families — woodwinds, strings, brasses and percussion, then the 24 single instruments within these sections.

Treat of the evening was Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 4 — of which the author once wrote: "Of none of my works for orchestra have I expended such love and devotion." Maestro Singer had this to say of the world-famed Symphony No. 4: "Here, in musical form, are those sensitive and poignant feelings which we so often leave dormant. Tchaikovsky rekindles them."

With Singer Monday night, there never was any doubt about the importance of his being on the podium — and he carried the 70 musicians through the demanding program without a score on that podium. He has memorized the music. Central Oregon music lovers agree "that never has an orchestra been more responsive to the baton than that of Singer."

There was only one moment of embarrassment: Part of the audience applauded at the wrong time, a musician touched a violin string, and the direction momentarily was off balance. Singer quickly reassembled his brilliant musicians and moved back into full symphony form.

The Portland Symphony was brought to Bend under auspices of the Junior Chamber of Commerce. Central Oregonians hailed the concert as the area's big music treat of recent years.

U.S., Japanese officials mull common woes

TOKYO (UPI) — Governors from nine American states and 18 Japanese prefectures met each other Monday night, overcoming the language barrier enough to discuss such common problems as juvenile delinquency, unemployment and education.

The meeting capped the first day of a hectic 16-day Meet-the-People visit to Japan in store for the governors, who arrived here in the early predawn hours Monday to attend the third annual Japan-U.S. Governors Conference.

The U.S. governors are scheduled to meet with Prime Minister Hayato Ikeda and be received in audience by Emperor Hirohito and Empress Nagako today.

A dinner party in their honor given by the Japan National Governors Association was the first opportunity for the U.S. governors to get acquainted with their Japanese counterparts. And the Americans made the most of it.

Gov. Farris Bryant of Florida said in a speech at the dinner the United States has much to learn from Japan, especially in the development of human resources.

With Bryant are Govs. John W. Reynolds, Wisconsin; John Anderson, Kansas; Albert D. Rosellini, Washington; Elbert N. Carvel, Delaware; Robert E. Smylie, Idaho; John M. Dalton, Missouri; Frank G. Clement, Tennessee and George D. Clyde, Utah.

Catholic fathers vote to authorize use of modern languages in church services

VATICAN CITY (UPI)—Ecumenical Council fathers voted, 2,103-19, today to authorize the use of modern languages instead of Latin in Roman Catholic weddings, funerals, baptisms and other sacraments.

In another significant action, they voted, 2,143-35, to change the name of the sacrament of extreme unction — commonly called "the last rites"—to "the sacrament of the anointing of the sick" in order to make clear that it is not intended merely for those who are dying.

At one of the busiest sessions they have held this fall, the council fathers also agreed by an overwhelming standing vote to close debate today on a document dealing with the clergy of the church. Wednesday they will begin debate on a document concerned with the role of the Catholic laity.

On Thursday, the fathers will take four crucial test votes on the general principles of the document on the clergy, which has been under discussion since this session of the council convened Sept. 29.

These votes will determine how the fathers feel about two controversial issues involved in the clergy document.

One is a proposal to restore the ancient order of deacons and permit them to marry. The other would recognize that bishops comprise a sacred college sharing with the Pope responsibility for the teaching and government of the entire church.

The document on the clergy is Chapter Two of a "Dogmatic Constitution" on the nature of the church. The document on the laity which comes up for debate Wednesday is Chapter Three.

Today the Ecumenical Council scheduled a vote on a series of amendments to chapter III of the document on liturgical reform, which is the first major business to reach the showdown state in the council. The chapter as a whole deals with sacraments other than the Mass. Most of the changes to be voted on are of a minor or technical nature, but one of them would have a direct effect on Catholic life and usage.

It proposes to change the name of "Extreme Unction" to "the sacrament of anointing with oil."

Some showers seen for area

Showers are in prospect for Central Oregon in the ensuing 24 hours, but apparently they will be few and not heavy, a weather forecast indicates.

Scattered showers are expected in the western Oregon country, and there is a chance of a few light showers in the far eastern part of the state.

Mild weather continued in Central Oregon today, with potato harvesters still waiting a killing frost to wilt vines.

ARRIVES FOR DISCUSSION
ISTANBUL, Turkey (UPI) — U.S. Assistant Secretary of State Philip Talbot arrived here Monday to chair a week-long meeting of American ambassadors in the Middle East.

They are scheduled to discuss the political and economic problems of the area.

Liturgical experts who drafted the amendment said its purpose is to make it clear that this sacrament is meant for all who are ill, and that it is a hopeful prayer for restoration of health, rather than a grim anticipation of imminent death.

They said this would be a change in the nature of the sacrament, but simply underscores its true purpose, which has been somewhat obscured in recent centuries.

They noted that the New Testament specifically refers to anointing the sick with oil as one of the sacramental practices of the early church.

The practice of anointing sick persons with oil in the precise fashion described in the New Testament has undergone a widespread revival in the Episcopal Church and some other non-Roman Christian communions in recent years, as part of a general rediscovery of the church's healing ministry.
