Bulletin's free candymaking school due here Thursday

By Ila Grant Hopper
Bulletin Staff Writer

Which do you like best — fudge, mints or peanut brittle? If you like candy (and who doesn't?) you can sample and decide, at The Bulletin's free candymaking school Thursday evening. It will be from 7:30 to 9:30, in the Thompson School auditorium. E. Remington Davenport, expert candymaker, will be the teacher.

Thousands of women (and men, too) who have attended the schools here and elsewhere, go away determined to learn how to make all three basic types.

In the fudge class are such candies as fondant, divinity and Mexican penuche. After-dinner mints are first cousins to taffy and molasses suckers. And if you have the know-how for peanut brittle, you can also whip up English toffee, popcorn crisp and nut glaze.

Davenport has been holding candy schools all over the country, for the past 20 years. Judging from the crowds who attend, and by the applause at the finish of the classes, the schools are not only educational, but entertaining as well.

Davenport is well equipped to teach candymaking. After college he taught and traveled abroad for three years. In Europe, where candymaking is really a science, he met one of the best candymakers on the continent. Both returned to America to work together, Davenport starting a career as a candymaker, candy factory superintendent and candy manufacturer.

Davenport describes the three basic candy-making techniques in detail, pointing out that the smallest mistake can ruin a batch of candy. "It's better to tell you 10 things you already know, than to omit one you don't know," he says.

Persons attending the school can learn how to make several types of candy by observing and taking notes. If they wish, they may also purchase Davenport's standard candy book, which sells for a dollar. There is no obligation to buy, however.

Savants doubt vote was aimed at education

PORTLAND (UPI) — Educators Tuesday night said they did not believe the vote against the legislature's tax bill was also a vote against education.

Educators said the heavy "no" vote was against the amount of taxes and the manner of raising them—instead of spending for education.

Eugene Fisher, chairman of the State Board of Education said only about a dozen of the state's 400 school districts had trouble getting their local budgets through this year.

"I think that's some indication that people want the quality education," he said.

William Walsh, chairman of the State Board of Higher Education, indicated that it might be necessary to raise admission standards and tuitions to preserve the quality of education.

The extent of cuts in educational expenses will not be known until further action is taken by the legislature or Gov. Mark Hatfield.

No emergency meetings have been scheduled by the State Board of Education or the State Board of Higher Education. The former meets Oct. 22 and the latter Oct. 28.

Music student offers program

Taber Hall, music student at Central Oregon College, is presented in a group of accordion selections in this week's COC radio program. He has worked out his own arrangements.

The first presentation will be tonight at 6:30, on Station KBND, Bend. The rest of the schedule is as follows: KPRB, Redmond, Friday, October 18, 12:45 p.m.; KRCC, Prineville, Monday, October 21, 4:45 p.m.; KGRL, Bend, Wednesday, October 23, 2 p.m.

ONLY 3 IN FAVOR

PORTLAND (UPI) — Just three of the 1,223 precincts in Multnomah County voted in favor of the income tax measure Tuesday.

Two precincts were in the area of the University of Oregon Medical School and the third was in an area where many residents live in public housing.

Howard reports he's 'delighted'

ALBANY (UPI) — Weekly newspaper publisher J. Francis Howard — the man who started it all—said he was "delighted" with the defeat of the tax increase bill.

"This has exceeded by expectations," he commented. Howard headed the successful drive to get the tax measure referred. But he said "I'm going to be more careful about my editorials in the future."

The referral movement was sparked when Howard ran an editorial in his weekly newspaper calling for referral of the tax measure, and he unexpectedly ended up heading the movement.

Third quarter figures given

The First National Bank of Oregon has released third quarter deposit and loan figures which, statewide, surpass comparable figures for any period in the bank's history.

The Bend branch of First National reported third quarter deposits of $10,379,953 and loans outstanding of $8,720,143, according to Branch Manager M. F. Shelton. Comparable totals for the branch a year ago were $9,776,969 in deposits and $7,847,877 in loans.

The First National of Prineville reported deposits of $10,027,000 and loans of $8,308,000. These compare with September, 1952, deposits of $9,651,000 and loans of $6,975,000.

Statewide, First National President Ralph J. Voss reported, the bank has accumulated deposits of $1,010,179,865 — a gain of more than $60 million over the comparable figure for a year ago.

The 99-office banking system has five buildings under construction with opening dates scheduled for November and December.

Ballot numbers cause confusion

SALEM (UPI) — Apparent improperly numbered ballots in scattered precincts will not invalidate Tuesday's tax referendum election, Secretary of State Howell Appaling Jr. declared today.

Appaling checked reports from Multnomah and Clatsop counties where voters complained election workers had improperly numbered ballots.

Appaling said a check with the printer revealed all ballots had been properly prepared with a numbered stub which was torn off the ballot before it was placed in the ballot box.

But at some precincts election workers were reported to have written the numbers on the ballot itself—making it theoretically possible to check how a person voted.

Appaling termed it "a completely erroneous procedure." Appaling said there had been two court cases involving similar errors in the past, and that the courts did not invalidate the election results.
