"Come To Worship, Go Forth To Serve"

On this page from week to week there appear the photographs of the buildings in which the church congregations of Bend meet for worship, study and fellowship. These buildings are constructed of wood, stone, brick, concrete, metal, glass and other building materials.

Although we refer to these buildings as "churches", churches are built not of material but they are Churches of God into which people have been called and asked to respond in service. The Greek New Testament word translated "church" literally means "an assembly, a gathering together of people".

The buildings in our community stand as a reminder to those of us who are good church members and those who are not, that God is still at work in our world. These buildings act as the center of activity of the congregations. Their size, their appearance, their setting do not necessarily always reflect the strength and knowledge, the faith and devotion, and the worship and service of the congregations.

It is as the people go forth from their worship, study and fellowship experiences into a program of witness to and service within the total community following the example of Jesus Christ that the strength of the church is demonstrated. This is the church at work in the world.

The motto on the Bulletin Board in front of the building previously occupied by the First Presbyterian Church congregation should be a challenge offered to every church member who approaches one of our church buildings: "Come In To Worship, Go Forth To Serve".
