Aides of Rock meet opposition by southerners

CHARLESTON, S. C. (UPI)—Aides of Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, seeking support for his presidential candidacy, ran into strong opposition today when Republican leaders from 12 of 13 southern states indicated they backed Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona.

The single dissident was the New York governor's brother, Winthrop Rockefeller, of Arkansas.

The southern political strategists scheduled closed-door sessions today to map plans for the southern campaign of Goldwater.

Mississippi GOP Chairman Wirt Yerger Jr., chairman of the Southern Association of State Republican Chairmen, said the only thing the Rockefeller aides were accomplishing was "giving away a lot of whisky."

Solid For Barry
All the state chairmen, with the exception of Winthrop Rockefeller, agreed that the South was solidly for Goldwater and expressed doubt that Rockefeller could win the GOP banner.

South Carolina GOP Chairman Drake Edens Jr. said Rockefeller did not have a "prayer of obtaining the nomination" and Alabama GOP Chairman John Grenier, director of the southern portion of the National Draft Goldwater Movement, said Rockefeller chances of being nominated "are practically nonexistent."

But Arkansas cattle rancher Winthrop Rockefeller disagreed. "A tremendous amount of people have had their belly-full of Kennedy," he said, and added that his brother could do a good job of attracting support of these people.

Aides Undeterred
"This is Goldwater country," agreed M. N. Seels, executive director of the New York Republican State Committee, "but it also is part of the country and that's why we're here."

North Pacific plant visited by voter group

As part of their study on the "Alliance for Progress," a group of members of the Bend Provisional League of Women Voters visited the plant of North Pacific Products Co., on Century Drive west of Bend, recently. The women on the tour were members of the League's resource committee on world trade.

North Pacific has an international operation as one would be likely to find, the women learned. The knocked-down toy planes manufactured there are made from balsa wood which is imported in bales from Ecuador. The printing is done on presses imported from Germany.

The finished project is sent all over the world, with major markets in England, Europe, South America, Hong Kong, Australia, New Zealand and Canada.

When the visit was made, the plant was stocked with 150 thousand board feet of balsa wood — quite a storehouse full. The plant has over 100 persons on the payroll. Recently undertaken was the job of filling the second five-million-plans order, for special packaging as a cereal box insert for General Mills.

New rate level seen advisable

SPOKANE (UPI) — Preference customers of the Bonneville Power Administration were told here Thursday by BPA Area Manager Norman Gilchrist that "it seems advisable, for discussion purpose, to suggest a possible new specific level of rates" by his firm.

Gilchrist told about 70 representatives of municipalities, Rural Electrification Administration cooperatives and public utility districts that the proposed rates would increase Bonneville's estimated firm power revenues by 8.5 per cent.

The rates, if adopted, would become effective Dec. 20, 1964, said Gilchrist, who presided at the meeting in the absence of BPA Administrator Charles Luce.

11 miners relaxing after being rescued from flooded iron mine

PEINE, Germany (UPI) — Eleven men who came back from the dead relaxed today in the hot baths and soft beds they dreamed about for the two weeks they were entombed in a flooded iron mine.

The men—10 miners and a young electrician trapped underground on his first trip into a mine—were brought safely to the surface Thursday in a dramatic rescue operation.

A doctor said they were "in good condition considering the ordeal they have suffered." "We are just content that after so long a time we can lie in a warm, soft bed after a good hot bath," one miner said.

Out Of Filth

"Our biggest joy," said another, "is to be out of that filth. No more lying on hard, cold stones... No more crouching." "You're lost down there without hope," said Adolf Herbst, the 20-year-old electrician, youngest among the survivors. "I feel fine now," Herbst said as he put his arm around his fiancée, brunette Dagmar Walczko. "But that was enough for me. I'll never go down in a mine again."

There was rejoicing in the men's home village of Lengede when a huge, American-made drill penetrated the men's tiny air pocket 187 feet down and a rescue capsule brought them to the surface one at a time through a two-foot escape shaft.

Church Bells Toll
Last Sunday the village church bells had tolled a death knell for the men and 29 others trapped in the Mathilde mine when a sedimentation basin on the surface collapsed on Oct. 24, flooding the mine.

Then, a few hours later, a probing test drill pierced the 9-by-12 foot chamber where the 11 men were still alive and the delicate operation to rescue them began.

Hearing held on extradition of Wasylenchuk

VANCOUVER, B.C. (UPI) — The extradition hearing of Canadian ex-convict John Wasylenchuk, wanted in Seattle on charges of murder and robbery, continued here today.

A statement was read in B.C. Superior Court Thursday claiming Wasylenchuk, 51, financed a 1954 bank robbery in Seattle.

It was presented by Vancouver lawyer Hugh McGivern, representing the U.S. government in the hearing. McGivern said the statement was an affidavit from Terrance Teague, a former inmate at the B.C. penitentiary who served time with Wasylenchuk.

It said Wasylenchuk boasted in prison that he financed the holdup of the Greenwood branch of the Seattle First-National Bank. A policeman was killed during the holdup.

It also stated that a second man, identified as Bobby Talbot, bought a car here which he took to Seattle and there met his common-law wife, Pat Kinley.

Talbot stole a car in Seattle and obtained license plates from a junk yard, the statement added.

It also said Wasylenchuk and Clifford Dawley, still imprisoned at the B.C. penitentiary, were driven to Seattle by a man identified as Peter Novis.

The group booked in at the Blue Bird Motel there.

The hearing encountered its first snag Thursday when Dawley refused to testify. Indications were he wanted legal counsel.

Interim report becomes model

An interim report prepared by the Bend Provisional League of Women Voters has been chosen by the organization's national headquarters as a model for all new members of the League. It traces progress and accomplishments of the organization.

The report was compiled by Mrs. George Marshall, Bend League president, from material submitted by her board members.

Announcement of the Bend achievement was made at the Western States Conference for board members of the League of Women Voters.

Board adopts policy on married students

Special to The Bulletin
PRINEVILLE — A policy concerning married students and expectant mothers attending Crook County High School has been formulated by the Crook county school board in official action at a special meeting.

Board members have given official outlines to the policy which has been in practice at CCHS concerning married students, that they are barred from participation in extra-curricular school activities, including athletics, clubs, the holding of elective or appointive offices and the honor society.

It was stipulated by the board that married students are not barred from any activities for which they receive credits towards graduation.

Such girls as might become expectant mothers, the board decreed, should leave high school at such a time as determined following consultation with a counselor. After the birth of the child, board members added, the student would be permitted to return to school, following further consultation.

The school board reserved the right to review any individual case as to circumstances and disposition.

The school board also went on record as asking that a noon-time ban on students using cars be put into effect immediately. High school students were banned from driving their cars at noon, without special permission, beginning November 4, and until yesterday there had been no disobedience of the ban, according to a school official. The noon driving ban was established, it was stated, to stop skipping after the lunch hour and to stop excessive "squirreling" and fast driving near the high school, but outside the jurisdiction of city police.

VFW, auxiliary plan dinner

A Veterans' Day dinner will be held Saturday, November 9, at 6:30 p.m. at the VFW Hall, N. First Street at Revere Avenue. Ponderosa Pine post No. 1643 and the auxiliary are sponsoring the event.

Members of all VFW posts in District 10 and their families, as well as other veterans and guests, are invited. The district is comprised of posts in Bend, Sisters, Madras, Redmond, Warm Springs, Prineville, Seneca and Burns.

After-dinner musical entertainment will be provided by a junior high school choral group, the Chordettes, under direction of Mrs. Bonnie Graves of the Bend school music staff. Mrs. Graves will be the accompanist.

New book against smoking authored by Oregon solon

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Maurine B. Neuberger, D-Ore., proposed today that each package of cigarettes be required to carry a warning that smoking can lead to lung cancer, heart disease and other health risks.

The proposal was part of a four-part attack on smoking outlined by the attractive former school teacher in her book, "Smoke Screen," which was published today. (Prentice-Hall, $3.95)

Mrs. Neuberger, a former smoker, stopped short of advocating tobacco prohibition, but she said there were "practical and judicious measures which can effectively be employed to brake the rising roll of smokers."

"It is my purpose in this book to enlist the support of my readers in the task of implementing such measures," she said.

But Mrs. Neuberger offered little hope of enlisting her fellow senators to enact legislation which would carry out any anti-smoking program. She proposed that the program be implemented by administrative orders "within the framework of existing legislation."

Mrs. Neuberger's book was the signal bell for what is expected to be a difficult round for the tobacco industry in the battle against any action that would curtail sale of its products.

A special committee appointed to deal the industry a severe blow late this year by reporting that there is a definite link between smoking and lung cancer, heart disease and other ailments.

Mrs. Neuberger said a host of surveys left no doubt there was a link between smoking and lung cancer, heart disease, emphysema, cancer of the bladder, gastric and duodenal ulcers, bronchitis, pneumonia, influenza, and other diseases.

She said her "best guess" was that there would be 300,000 to 500,000 fewer deaths each year if it were not for smoking. In addition, she said, there probably are about 1 million or 2 million persons in this country who are "disabled to some degree by the effect of smoking cigarettes."
