Costumes needed for Camp Fire, Blue Bird girls

Camp Fire and Blue Bird costumes are very much in demand, according to Mrs. Barbara Reynolds, executive director, and she has requested that anyone having such outfits available for use bring them to her office.

The service costumes for Blue Bird and Camp Fire girls are not available at a local retail outlet at the present time. For this reason, and because of the number of groups newly organized this fall, many girls are without the official outfits.

The Blue Bird costume consists of a cap, red vest, navy blue skirt and white blouse. The Camp Fire girls wear a navy blue skirt, white blouse, red tie and beanie.

Anyone having any part of, or a complete outfit, they are willing to donate, are requested to bring them to the Camp Fire office, in the Penney Building, Monday through Friday afternoons. Outfits should be marked with size, Mrs. Reynolds said.

Plectron taken from home

The home of George Churchill, member of the Bend fire department, was entered Thursday, but apparently the only thing taken was a plectron — a radio receiver used by firemen in keeping in touch with fire calls. Plectrons are activated from the station, and are of no value to anyone other than a fireman, Churchill noted.

He said that if the person who took the plectron from his home returns it, or notifies him by telephone where it can be found, no questions will be asked.

It was noted that there is a possibility that a youngster might have picked up the instrument. Churchill lives at 104 East Ninth.

Editor critical of Morse bill as choking off pre-trial news

EUGENE (UPI) —A legal expert asked restraint on the part of newsmen in handling trial stories, and a managing editor suggested more compliance on the part of the legal fraternity in a conference on news coverage of the courts here Friday.

Robert Notson, managing editor of the Oregonian, criticized a Senate bill proposed by Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., which Notson said would choke off the right of the public to pre-trial information.

The bill would make release of any information except that on file with the court punishable by a fine of not less than $500.

Notson said relatively few cases get to trial. In Multnomah County, he set the figure at 20 per cent, meaning that under the Morse bill 80 per cent of the cases would be disposed of without public knowledge.

Orlando Hollis, dean of the University of Oregon Law School, said self restraint on the part of newsmen will be a major factor in continuing freedom of the press.

Hollis said there are few legal restraints left on news coverage and self-restraint by reporters is the only way by which persons before the courts can be assured of justice.

He urged reporters to familiarize themselves and their readers with the workings of the courtroom and to explain law terms in their copy as a matter of steady practice.

The conference is attempting to bring out the views of both lawyers and newsmen in a series of panel discussions and talks.

Brockman will be playing music by Schubert, Mozart, Chopin, Liszt and Handel.

Following the concert, there will be a meeting of the Community Concert board in the cafeteria room of the high school.
