Goldwater has no plans to speed decision

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., is not going to speed up his decision on whether to seek the GOP presidential nomination because Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller already has entered the race.

Goldwater told United Press International that the announcement of Rockefeller's candidacy Thursday would not affect his timetable in the least. The senator made the statement in reply to questions submitted by UPI.

The Arizona conservative is expected to announce his decision in January. Sen. Norris Cotton, R-N.H., urged Goldwater Sunday to declare his candidacy for the nomination before January or risk losing the New Hampshire primary on March 10.

Cotton said in a television interview that Goldwater could "very well kiss New Hampshire goodbye" unless he declared himself soon enough for local supporters to campaign for him. Cotton is a Goldwater backer.

Rockefeller went immediately to New Hampshire to campaign after announcing his candidacy. He also plans to enter the California primary on June 2 and has challenged Goldwater to run against him in both contests.

Goldwater told UPI that if he became a candidate he would expect to enter the New Hampshire and California primaries and perhaps others where there was no "favorite son."

The senator also said it would be "highly illogical" for anyone to suggest that he might shift away from some of his conservative views if he campaigned for president.

Bond issue proposals get mixed reception by voters

By Jesse Bogus
UPI Staff Writer
NEW YORK (UPI) — Bond issue proposals got a mixed reception from voters in last week's elections, but the unremitting search by the states for funds in one form or another has fared well this year to date.

A New York research group reports that 35 states have passed laws this year to get funds from new tax sources or to raise the return from existing taxes.

The largest of the bond issue proposals in last Tuesday's elections, was the $750 million matter advanced by New Jersey officials who said the money was needed for a five-year construction program on highways, schools, and state institutions.

It was defeated, although the administration of Gov. Richard J. Hughes in New Jersey had said that the alternative would be either a state income tax or a state sales tax.

Indiana Tax Delayed
To date this year, according to the Tax Review of Tax Foundation, Inc., Indiana is the only state which has passed a general sales tax. The state legislature enacted laws for a two percent retail sales and use tax, an individual income tax, and a corporate income tax. It originally was slated to go into effect July 1, but court action has delayed its application.

This review said that tax measures passed by states together were expected to turn up an additional $1,036 million for their treasuries. But 22 states rejected proposed tax increases, which would have turned an estimated $945 million out of the pockets of their citizens.

Most of the tax legislation passed to date in 1963, the review said, has dealt with the six major fields tapped by the states traditionally.

These are individual income; corporate net income; general sales and gross receipts; and excise taxes on tobacco products, alcoholic beverages and motor fuels.

Tax Base Broadened
Eight states broadened the base of their sales tax to cover areas previously ignored. Seven increased sales tax rates, and two states did both.

Pennsylvania, in a move expected to add $103 million a year to state coffers, raised its selective sales tax rate from 4 to 5 per cent, highest of any state. North Dakota increased its rate from 2 to 2½ per cent, and broadened the area in which

Legal action keeps alive two-year-old sea tragedy

MIAMI (UPI)—Another sheaf of legal papers kept alive today when he returned to Miami that a storm had snapped the mast of the Bluebelle on the night of Nov. 12 and sent it through the hull of the ketch. There was a fire and panic aboard, he said, and when it was over the Bluebelle had gone down and the only sign of his passengers was the body of Rene, floating in a life jacket.

It was on behalf of the only survivor of the tragedy, Terry Jo Duperrault, that suits were filed in federal court Monday seeking a total of $750,000 from three Miami brokers charged with negligence in drawing up charter papers for the last voyage of the Bluebelle.

That was to have been a harp, the dream vacation of Arthur Duperrault, 44, a Green Bay, Wis., optometrist and his family. There was his wife, Jean Duperrault, 38, and the three children, Terry Jo, 11, Rene, 7, and the brother, Brian, 14.

And there was the skipper, handsome, suntanned Julian A. Harvey, 45, a muscular adventurer, former Air Force test pilot and racing captain. The first mate was his pretty wife, Mary Dene, 38.

The 60-foot Bluebelle, a trim blue-hulled ketch that had been built at Sturgeon Bay, Wis., sailed Nov. 8, 1961, from Fort Lauderdale for the leisurely cruise through the Bahamas.

The first news of the violent end of that cruise came Nov. 13, when Harvey was picked up by a freighter as he drifted in a dinghy in New Providence Channel in the Bahamas. Tied to his boat was a rubber life raft carrying the body of young Rene Duperrault.

Harvey told the Coast Guard when he returned to Miami that a storm had snapped the mast of the Bluebelle on the night of Nov. 12 and sent it through the hull of the ketch. There was a fire and panic aboard, he said, and when it was over the Bluebelle had gone down and the only sign of his passengers was the body of Rene, floating in a life jacket.

It was almost as Harvey was telling his story on the morning of Nov. 16 that a man named Nicholas Spachidakis on a freighter named the Captain Theo spotted what he thought was a fishing buoy bobbing on the Atlantic. This was Terry Jo, severely sunburned, but alive.

The next day, as doctors reported she would survive her ordeal, Harvey slashed himself fatally with a razor blade in his Miami motel room.

When Terry Jo could tell her story, it didn't jibe with Harvey's.

On the night the Bluebelle went down, she recalled, she was awakened in her cabin below-decks by her brother's frantic cry: "Help daddy. Daddy, help."

When she went outside she found her mother and the boy, young Brian, lying in pools of blood near the stairway to the deck. On the deck, she said she found Harvey with a pail of water, and he ordered her back below.

Up Second Time
She said when she was up a second time to escape the water rising in her cabin she found the decks awash and saw Harvey leaping overboard toward an empty dinghy. She saved herself with a life raft she found still aboard.

This was the Coast Guard's conclusion: That Harvey killed his wife, the Duperrault parents and Brian, and scuttled his ship, but did not harm the two girls "probably in the assumption that they would drown when the vessel sank."

Rene probably did drown, the Coast Guard said, and Harvey picked up her body to lend credibility to his story.

The "most probable cause" for the tragedy, the Coast Guard said, "was the state of mind of Julian A. Harvey," and a $20,000 double indemnity insurance policy Harvey had taken out on his wife not long before was listed as a possible motive.

Terry Jo, now 13, lives with relatives in West De Pere, Wis. Monday's suit was filed by the Kellogg-Citizens National Bank of Green Bay on behalf of Terry Jo.

Junta shakes up army commands

SAIGON, Viet Nam (UPI) — American advisers were hopeful today that two tough, capable new Vietnamese commanders will revitalize the effort to defeat Communist Viet Cong guerrillas in the important Mekong Delta area.

The military junta which overthrew President Ngo Dinh Diem Nov. 1 has appointed Col. Pham Van Dong, 44, as commander of the 7th Army Division, which holds four crucial provinces just south of Saigon.

Brig. Gen. Nguyen Huu Co, 39, has taken command of the 4th Army Corps, which is responsible for the nine remaining provinces of the delta further south, including the Communist-infested Camau Peninsula.

Both men are French-trained veterans of the Indo China war. They have associated with American military men for several years and attended the U.S. Command and General Staff School at Ft. Leavenworth.

Longtime American advisers, although warning that years of bitter fighting may lie ahead, feel that American advice will now be more readily accepted and the war will be prosecuted more effectively and aggressively in the delta area.

Road program gets under way

Preliminary work has been started on a project that will provide an improved road from East Lake 3.8 miles to the east, over the Newberry Crater Rim toward China Hat.

In charge of the grading and cinder surfacing of the road is the Washington Construction Co., firm which has the subcontract for the clearing in connection with improvement of the Cascade Lakes Highway from the forest edge west of Bend to Bachelor Butte.

The firm has moved equipment into the Newberry Crater area and will continue work as long as weather conditions in the high country permit.

The 3.8 mile section of the route being improved east from Newberry Crater will eventually link with the north-south China Hat forest route.

Red bloc may enter U.S. market for fats and oils

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Agriculture Department said today speculation that the Soviet bloc may enter the U.S. market for fats and oils has caused prices for those commodities to jump considerably above normal.

The department said the general level of U.S. fats and oils prices advanced about 15 per cent from mid-September through early November. The speculation that the Soviets may enter the U.S. market arose after the USSR bought wheat from Canada and began negotiations to buy additional quantities of the breadgrain from the United States.

The USSR sunflower seed crop is believed to be down somewhat because of dry and hot weather last summer. Sunflower seed is the Soviet Union's major oil-bearing crop.

The department said the price bullism developed at a time when U.S. oilseeds, fats, and oils marketings are the heaviest and prices normally are at their seasonal lows. But prices are up and, according to the department, are likely to continue strong throughout the 1963-64 marketing year.

The agency forecast the U.S. supply of edible fats, oils and oilseeds, during the 1963-64 marketing year which began Oct. 1 at a record 17 billion pounds (in terms of oil). This is about 3 per cent more than the peak quantity available last year.

The department said the increase was due to larger starting stocks of edible vegetable oils and the record 1963 soybean crop now estimated at about 727 million bushels.

The department said present export prospects for edible fats and oils (including the oil equivalent of soybeans) indicate that the 1963-64 total may set a record of around 4.9 billion pounds. This is about 15 per cent more than the 4.3 billion pounds shipped abroad in 1962-63.

An export volume of this size would comprise about a third of the 1963-64 U.S. output of these commodities.

The department said current indications are that the entire 1963 crop of soybeans will be needed to meet prospective demand. The agency forecast the 1963-64 season average farm price of soybeans at $2.60 per bushel, compared with $2.34 in 1962-63.

Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman announced that electric and telephone systems financed by the Rural Electrification Administration (REA) have passed the $2 billion mark in payments on their loans.

REA has approved a cumulative total of about $6 billion in loans to electric and telephone borrowers in 46 states, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands. The electric borrowers serve 5.1 million rural consumers, and the telephone borrowers serve nearly 1.5 million subscribers.

The national acreage allotment for the 1964 rice crop has been set at 1.82 million acres, the same as in 1963.

The red carpet was laid out Saturday for a happy Customer, Bernice Nisley, Rt. 1, Box 49A, Madras, when she was announced as the 5,000th Customer to trade with GREER OIL CO.'s ENCO Station in North Redmond. She was awarded a FREE CAR WASH, LUBE & OIL CHANGE, a TANK FULL OF GAS and last but not least, A DELICIOUS STEAK DINNER at the Brand Cafe, So. of Redmond. YOU MAY BE THE NEXT LUCKY DRIVER!!!!

Goulart not impressed by Alliance

SAO PAULO, Brazil (UPI)—Americans attending an economic conference here said today Brazil's President Joao Goulart "doesn't seem to attach much importance" to the U.S. Alliance for Progress program for aid to Latin America.

Goulart made only a passing reference to the U.S. aid program in a speech Monday formally opening the conference of the Inter-American Economic and Social Council, which is reviewing the alliance's achievements.

"I was disappointed by his speech," said Rep. Bradford Morse, D-Mass.

A Brazilian delegate to the conference said his government is more interested in promoting Latin American trade than in carrying out the reforms suggested as part of the Alliance program.

"Our position is that the most important thing to be accomplished in Latin America is development through growing trade relations . . ." he said. "A strong Latin American position in foreign trade would be a profound stimulus to development . . ."

The aid program calls on its Latin American beneficiaries to institute land reforms and other measures to provide increased opportunities for the people.

Tree permits ready Nov. 27

Special to The Bulletin
PRINEVILLE—Families can spend part of their Thanksgiving weekend cruising the forest to spot a likely Christmas tree, if they so desire. The Ochoco National Forest office has announced that Christmas tree cutting permits for families will be available beginning November 27. C. L. Clark, forest supervisor, states that permits will be issued by district rangers at their respective offices.

A charge of $1 will be made for each family permit, Clark said. Any species except young ponderosa pine may be cut for the family tree in the general areas where such cutting is to be allowed. The permits are available until December 22 and are valid through December 25.

There were reports the girl had been in a drug-induced coma for three days before she died. It was reported that on the day of her death a man left a package of drugs at an address near Amerden House, where her body was found.

"Julie enmeshed others and none of them seemed to regret it," a friend of Miss Molley's said. "She was to them a high priestess of love."

It was reported that detectives found two diaries kept by Miss Molley, and from them got the names of army officers, wealthy businessmen and others who apparently had dealings with her. They continued to hunt for a third diary kept by the girl, the reports said.

The investigation of Miss Molley's activities began more than two months before her death when a man complained he was being blackmailed.
