

If she enjoys the theater or the opera, she will be thrilled with a Christmas gift of opera glasses with a retractable case (upper left) in jeweler's bronze. The perfect gag gift (that might even get some serious use) is the jiffy wig (upper right). It fits any head and can be set in a dozen styles. The shirt look is here for winter and cuff links an important accessory. This pair (lower left) includes her timepiece, too. The link without the watch has a synthetic stone. A gift of beauty is always welcome. Crown bottle cologne and dusting powder (lower right) are presented in a fragrance-matched combination gift set.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Boots are in. Curly hair is out. The fur hat is in. The low heeled walking shoe is out.

These are some of the ins and outs of style currently reflected by the women who fill the New York show rooms of fashion manufacturers this time of the year. They're the buyers by the thousands, the models, the reporters and the sprinkling of celebrities who are jamming the show rooms to see spring and summer clothes for milady. The shows continue through this week; the clothes will begin to appear in the stores across the nation after the first of the year.

The boots are not the conventional rainwear. They're the mid-calf or nearly knee-highs designed to wear as shoes and not necessarily to keep the feet dry on a rainy day.

They're in with the younger looking buyers and in with Barbara Streisand, the young singing success, who showed at the Maurice Rentner collection wearing brown crocodile boots reaching just below the knee.

Bulky Fur Coat
To go with the boots, Miss Streisand wore a bulky, wrap-around fur coat plus matching fur chechia.

Miss Streisand said the coat was a copy of the type the dancer Vera Zorina made famous in her movie dancing days of another era. The chechia is a brimless, cylindrical hat whose style is of Arabian origin.

And what was the long-haired fur?

"Why should I tell you," said the singing star, "when everyone thinks it's sable?"

Guess of the non-expert on fur varieties: It was fisher. Fur hats, with cloth coats, are in with many of the buyers. Favorite hat furs are mink or the spotted leopards and ocelots. In with the buyers also is the return to higher heels which outpace the sleek walking shoe of last year by a wide margin.

Out for the models (and ultimately out for the rest of us because these girls are harbingers of fashion) is curly hair. All of the mannequins are wearing straight and casual bobs that look more like copies of a Carline rather than a Jacqueline Kennedy hairdo. Most of the straight bobs are parted on one side with the ends trimmed to a neat horizontal line falling one to two inches below the ear. Only curl is the half-moon flip of a lock brought forward on the cheek.

In with a splash are the bright colors to offset the familiar and "safe" black dress or suit. The show rooms are a sea of yellows, Kelly greens, pale and medium blues, oranges and all shades of pink which has become an any season color.

Noisy Bracelets
Still in are the assorted charm bracelets noisy as a brass band and the ubiquitous handbags of voluminous proportions. (If they get any larger they should go as suitcases). In are bulky tweed and moiré suits, a lot of camel hair coats and suits, and about as many variations of the chanel suit—with its collarless cardigan jacket—as there are fabrics in which to make it.

YULE POLISH
For the guy who can't or the one who won't bend over to shine his shoes — a stand-up electric shoe polisher. Twin polishing bonnets, one for black and one for brown shoes, remove dust and buff shoes. The polisher is powered by a 110-120 volt A.C. motor.
