JFK funeral brings largest gathering of world leaders

By Bart Kinch
UPI Staff Writer
The largest gathering of world leaders on U. S. shores took place in Washington this week...

The assassination of the president shocked the world. Kings, princes, presidents and representatives traveled to the nation's capital to pay their respects to the fallen leader of the free world.

Many stayed over to meet with the new president, Lyndon B. Johnson, who only a few days before had taken the oath of office in an airplane before returning to Washington after Kennedy's assassination.

The world leaders, De Gaulle, Douglas - Home, Ehrhart and others, wanted to size up the man from Texas who had this great burden of world leadership thrust upon him.

Lyndon Johnson, the 36th president of the United States,

Market Affected

The death of President Kennedy had resulted in a slump in stock prices on the exchange markets of the world. After Johnson met with many of the leaders of Western Europe and Asia, it began to rise.

The new president had impressed the visiting dignitaries with his ability to cope with any situation he might be called upon to face as president of the United States.

They returned to their homelands assured that the policies of the late president would be continued.

The free world, and much of the Communist world, was relieved.

But the sorrow and shock remained. The nation and the world poured out its heart for the grief-stricken widow and her family.

Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy was referred to as "the valiant lady" by Richard Cardinal Cushing. Five times she visited the grave of her husband before departing for Hyannis Port on Cape Cod, Mass., for a family Thanksgiving reunion...

Camp Fire tea honors visitor from Thailand

Members of the Dakonya and Watanka Camp Fire groups of Bend met last evening for a tea honoring Miss Sawat Karnjanatrakul of Thailand.

The social event was held at the home of Mrs. Joe Hubler, 751 E. Quimby.

Miss Karnjanatrakul is a holiday guest at the Virgil Hammer home, 235 Jefferson Place. She is enrolled for her junior year at Oregon State University as a pre-medical student.

This is indicated in a report by David L. Cole, assistant professor of anthropology at the University of Oregon.

The report deals with the discovery earlier in the year of artifacts on the Bear and Camp Creek divide in southern Crook County.

There, William S. Wells, Milwaukie, found a number of stone artifacts. One, he believed, resembled a Clovis "fluted" point, and he proposed that the area be set aside and investigated, as a possible butchering site of mammoth hunters long ago.

Report casts doubt on theory that mammoth hunter site found

Because of the antiquity of the Clovis men and their "cousins," the Folsom hunters, and the fact that artifacts of these ancient tribesmen of the Southwest had been associated with extinct animals, the reported Oregon discovery attracted wide interest and received national attention.

To make it possible for scientists to study the area, the Bureau of Land Management withdrew the public domain, and set it aside for investigation.

A number of institutions were interested in the reported find of a Clovis-like point in the high country of interior Oregon. Cole was authorized to visit and study the site, and now has reported his findings to the U.S. Bureau of Land Management.

Cole found no evidence that the site was used by ancient hunters to kill and butcher animals, such as the mammoth, that ranged over interior Oregon in post-glacial times.

No mammal bones were found, no camp area was located. However, some artifacts were unearthed. Of the artifacts collected, 21 were either tool "blanks" or fragments that had been discarded.

The artifacts were made from quartz-family rocks found in the region. There were also some pieces of chipped obsidian. These possibly represent broken points of spent projectile heads used by hunters of a comparatively recent era.

The University of Oregon anthropologist favors the theory that the Crook County site, where outliers of the Ochoco hills dip into the High Desert country, was a tool quarry used by wandering hunters of several centuries ago.

It was the practice of aborigines of the area, Cole noted, to go to the source of material, rough out stones and carry away "blanks" that could be worked later.

Cole has thanked the Bureau of Land Management and Wells for their interest in the site, and for cooperation while the study was in progress.

GETS HIS EXERCISE
LONDON (UPI) — Lord Manscroft, shoveling cement at a construction site ceremony, said Friday, "I'm breaking in two. The only exercise I normally do is walking up hospital stairs to visit friends who have injured themselves doing too much exercise."

Cubs, parents receive awards

Thirty Cub Scouts, parents and other relatives were present during a recent session of Pack 25 in which awards both to Cubs and parents were distributed.

Held in the Fellowship Room of First Presbyterian Church, the session saw bobcat pins and service stars given to Cubs, and den mothers' badges to parents.

A wide variety of subjects is to be offered when the program gets underway in the near future, Sawyer said. Some classes are scheduled to begin in December, others in January.

Subjects offered range from typing and refresher shorthand to art, welding and sewing.

A similar adult education program is being arranged in each of the Central Oregon communities, all under the sponsorship of the Central Oregon College study program, Sawyer said.

Service stars and other awards went to: Roger Bristol, Dick Struncker, Tom Etlinger and Cubmaster Ken Dykeman.

Mothers receiving den mothers' badges were: Mrs. Marie R. Billings, Mrs. Betty Farstedt, Mrs. Mary Ann Jones, Mrs. Eileen Hudson, Mrs. Donna Scott, Mrs. Lois M. Harvey, Mrs. Carol Talbert.

A Pilgrims' Hootenanny was presented as a skit by Cubs of Den 2.

Bend lodge aids initiation

Alpine Temple of Bend, Pythian Sisters, assisted Juniper Temple of Prineville with initiation ceremonies held recently in Prineville.

The Degree staff, comprising members of both temples and supervised by Mrs. Fred Gibson of Bend, carried out the ceremonies. Special guests of Juniper Temple were Myrtle Caldwell of Portland, grand chief of the Pythian Order, and Elva Dehler of Wasco, grand protector.

Refreshments served by Alpine Temple followed ceremonies.

Nominations for new officers will be held at the regular meeting of Alpine Temple on December 5. All members are urged to attend.

Weekly health report issued

Twelve influenza cases in Jefferson County and three in Crook County made that disease most prominent among communicable ailments reported this week to the Tri-County Health Department.

Jefferson County, with 100 per cent of all medical sources reporting, also listed two chicken pox, two gastro-enteritis, one diarrhea and one shigella.

Crook County influenza cases were the only communicable diseases reported by 50 per cent of available sources.

Guy LaFollette taken by death

Word has been received here of the death in Seattle, Wash., earlier this week of Guy LaFollette, 78, a native of Prineville who from 1905 to 1922 published the Crook County Journal, now the Central Oregonian. He was a member of a pioneer family of the Prineville country. He was born on April 7, 1885.

The death of Mr. LaFollette occurred on Tuesday.

In 1949, Mr. LaFollette in Seattle was one of the organizers of the Family Insurance Company, and remained active in its management until his death. His sons, Roderick G. and Thomas A., Seattle, now head the rapidly expanding insurance firm.

Aside from his sons, the ex-Prineville publisher is survived by his wife, Elizabeth, and two daughters, Mrs. Lewis H. Putney, Squamish, Wash., and Mrs. Willard Morgan, Coquille.

November, 1963, damper, cooler

November, 1963, a stormy month, was much damper than normal and a bit cooler, data compiled for the local cooperative weather station shows.

There were few days of clear skies, and there was measurable moisture on eight different days.

Moisture measured in the month amounted to 1.84 inches compared with an average of 1.40 inches. Bend on the morning of November 23 recorded its first measurable snow of the season, but it amounted to only 3/8 of an inch.

On November 8-9, Bend recorded its heaviest 24 hour moisture of the year, 1.04 inches.

The mean temperature for the month that ends tonight at midnight was 38.4 degrees, just a fraction of a degree under the long-time normal.
