

AT WAR—While older generations were ready to do battle with "old man winter" with snow fires, anti-freeze and higher heating bills, the younger set was worrying about snow forts and forthcoming snow ball fights. Matt Mathews, 8 1/2 East Eighth, is pictured late Tuesday afternoon putting his version of a snow fort into place.

Prineville JC's set Christmas parade Saturday

Special to The Bulletin
PRINEVILLE — The 1963 Jaycee-sponsored Christmas parade will be held in Prineville Saturday, starting at 9:30, with marchers to participate in three groups, church, individual and youth.
The parade will be for youngsters, and will be themed on the yule season, with prizes of $5, $3 and $2 to be awarded first, second and third place winners in each of the three divisions.
Judging will start before the parade swings along Main Street to Second, then on to Fourth, and on Fourth from Main to Claypool, Claypool to Third, then to Belknap.
Division No. 1 will be assigned church groups, with individual entries next in line. Then will come the many youth groups. Prizes will be for the best presentation of the spirit of Christmas, Sam Webb and Sid Harper, in charge for the Jaycees, have announced.
Santa Claus will have a part in the Saturday morning celebration marking the near approach of Christmas, and will come to Crooked River Valley in style — by plane. He will be flown in by Dick Ballantine.
Santa will be brought to downtown Prineville by a special escort. Following the parade, he will distribute candy and popcorn, from the steps of the Ochoco Inn, as youngsters file by.
At 1 p.m. Saturday, there will be a free movie for youngsters.

Impact of cutbacks won't be known until next May

Editors note: The full impact of the scrapping of construction projects as a result of the Oct. 15 tax referendum will not be known until voters next May decide the future of the $30 million higher education bond issue. Second of five.

By Zan Stark
UPI Staff Writer
SALEM (UPI)—Students at state colleges and universities may have to slog through the mud, fight for space in overcrowded classrooms or attend classes in summer.
Needed repairs at state institutions have been postponed, and the new Agriculture Department building remains but a dream.
But the junking of $15.4 million in capital construction projects in the wake of the Oct. 15 tax referendum won't deny qualified students an educational opportunity, and state wards will not be denied care—at least in the immediate future.
Full impact of higher education construction cutbacks won't be known until next May, when voters decide the fate of a $30 million higher education bond issue.
Approval of the bonds would allow most of the projects approved for this biennium to proceed — although the $12 million in projects the bonds originally were to finance would remain in limbo.
During the special session of the legislature the proposed bond issue was revised so that if it passes the $1.3 million in community college construction that was junked after the Oct. 15 vote can proceed.
The scrapping of building projects created many hardships. In 1961 the legislature authorized about $2 million for a science building at Portland State College. This project was a victim of the 1960 austerity program because construction had not yet started.
Yet this week the Board of Higher Education was able to authorize a $1 million multi-level student parking facility—because funds for this project were not affected by the Oct. 15 election.
In 1961, $6 million was approved for construction of a new Oregon Technical Institute campus at Klamath Falls. The 1963 legislature earmarked more than $300,000 for sidewalks, driveways, parking areas and landscaping at OTI. This fell victim to the economy axe. When the new campus opens late next year students may be wading through mud to get to new classrooms.
The Agriculture Department, long anxious to move out of its present outdated building, also fell victim to the economy drive. The department has the $1 million-plus needed for the new structure—but cutbacks froze the few thousand dollars needed to buy the last parcels of land on which the new building was to be erected.
Some $2.4 million in Board of Control projects—remodeling at Columbia Park Hospital, heating plants at Fairview Home and Eastern Oregon Hospital, an administration building at Hillcrest, land acquisition—were victims of the cutbacks.
The following higher education projects had been budgeted from the 1963-65 general fund, but were cancelled. They may be financed by the bond issue if it passes next May:
Replacement of Campbell Hall $292,000, and class and laboratory building $820,000, at Oregon College of Education; utility tunnel, $465,000 and mathematics building, $750,000, at Oregon State University; physical education building at Portland State, $3.4 million; Southern Oregon College class and laboratory building, $955,000; and science and mathematics building at Eastern Oregon College, $875,000. In addition, the plan is to include the Portland State science building, and money for sidewalks at OTI, in the bond-financed projects.
The construction delays compound the difficulties created by the $20 million in one-shot revenues picked up for this biennium.
The one-shot method, through bookkeeping changes, included as revenue for 1963-65 money that normally would have been collected in the 1963-67 biennium.
Delaying construction in 1963-65 simply means that the building bill in 1965-67 will be bigger, and more urgent.
It is relatively easy to cut spending as the result of the Oct. 15 tax referendum. But the austerity cutbacks did not slow the increased demands on state schools and institutions that result from spiraling populations.

Employment holds up well
Despite scattered and temporary layoffs in logging, construction and farm work, employment held up exceedingly well throughout the Central Oregon area this past month, according to information from the Bend district office of the Oregon Employment Service.
Estimated unemployment in the area populated by some 40,000 people was only about 1,100, down 400 from a year ago and 650 less than two years ago. This time two years ago there were an estimated 1,750 unemployed in the big area, which embraces Deschutes, Jefferson and Crook Counties and parts of four other counties.
In October, 122 different non-farm employers placed job openings with the Employment Service. These openings represented 77 titles within the broad occupation groups.
Potato harvest work was spasmodic and irregular because of weather conditions which were unfavorable both for maturing and picking potatoes.
Clark A. Price, manager of the area office in Bend, said his office has on file many qualified men, boys, women and girls available for sales work during the Christmas buying period.

Park transfer is completed

SALEM (UPI) — Documents transferring the proposed Boardman Space Age Industrial Park to the State Veterans Agency, and ratifying every phase of the project's development were signed at a seven-minute special meeting of the State Land Board today.
Gov. Mark Hatfield and Treasurer Howard Belton signed the special resolution "ratifying and confirming a recapitulation of the particular negotiations, purchases, sales, transfers and exchanges of land and property which were made in the course of acquiring and creating" the 100,000-acre project in northeastern Oregon.
Secretary of State Powell Appling Jr., who was I.T. at the meeting because he attended a funeral, submitted a letter indicating he approved the ratification agreement, and would sign it later.
Today's action by the Land Board apparently duplicates legislative action which ratified transactions made to create the park which has been leased to Boeing Co. of Seattle.
It was announced transfer of title of 48,000 acres of Navy bombing range property—the final block of property involved in creating the park—is expected to take place later this week.

Annual meeting set by Council

The Deschutes Chapter of the Oregon Fish and Game Council will hold its annual meeting Friday night, December 13, in the district court room of the Deschutes County courthouse, with 7:30 p.m. set as the starting time.
Officers for the coming year will be named and various matters of business, including a report of the Oregon Legislature's interim committee study of the deer controversy, will be aired.
Also to be presented will be a report on the state meeting of the Oregon Fish and Game Council, held in Eugene on November 28.
Gerald W. McCann, Bend, has headed the Deschutes Chapter of the Oregon Fish and Game Council since its organization in the late fall of 1962.

Bank declares cash dividend

Directors of the Bank of Central Oregon, Redmond, at their regular meeting on December 9 declared a cash dividend on the outstanding stock of the bank.
This dividend will be $2.00 per share payable December 20, 1963 to stockholders of record on December 9, 1963. The announcement was made on behalf of the Board by John D. Bauer, vice president and cashier.
This dividend is the first that the Bank of Central Oregon has paid to its stockholders since its organization in September, 1960. The head office of the bank was opened in Redmond on September 10, 1960 and subsequently the branch in Bend was opened on April 24, 1963.
In the slightly more than three years of operation the Bank of Central Oregon has attained a growth in deposits to its present total of $3,350,000 and total loans at the present of slightly under 2 million. It was reported by the officers.

Girls to hold exhibit, bazaar on Saturday

Bend area Girl Scouts will hold a Christmas tree exhibit and bazaar on Saturday, December 14. The annual event is scheduled from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. in Brooks Hall, Trinity Episcopal Church, on Wall Street.
Each Girl Scout troop is preparing a Christmas tree with decorations made by the troop. Following the exhibit on Saturday, the trees will be given to St. Charles Memorial Hospital and local rest homes.
The bazaar will feature Christmas decorations, candles, cookies, candy and gifts.
Chairmen for the event are Mrs. R. C. Friberg and Mrs. Jerry Shank.

Meeting called for dairymen

Special to The Bulletin
REDMOND — Central Oregon Dairymen are invited to attend a meeting on control of mastitis to be held at the Pleasant Ridge Community Hall December 17. Starting time for the meeting is 10:30 a.m. and will close at 2:30 p.m. Women of the Pleasant Ridge community will serve a noon lunch.
The dairymen's meeting is sponsored by the Central Oregon Dairymen's Association, according to Robert Peterson, Bend, president. Dr. Kermit Peterson, member of the Oregon State University Veterinary Department, Harold Ewalt, Extension Dairy Specialist, and Mike Huber, Agricultural Engineering Specialist, also of Oregon State University, will present the major part of the program.

SELLING INTEREST

LONDON (UPI)—The Trades Union Congress is selling its 49 per cent interest in the London Daily Herald to news magnate Cecil King, the Daily Express reported today.
The Herald has had difficulty raising its circulation, attributed to its ties with the Trades Union Congress, the British equivalent of the American AFL-CIO.
