Resource group will oppose fish measure

SALEM (UPI) — The Governor's Committee on Natural Resources indicated today it would formally oppose an initiative measure which would outlaw commercial salmon and steelhead fishing on the Columbia River.

Gov. Mark Hatfield named a four-man committee to draft the formal wording of the resolution, which probably will be adopted at the committee's next meeting.

The decision is a blow to sports fishermen, and the Save Our Salmon and Steelhead Group which is sponsoring an initiative measure to outlaw the commercial fishery on the river.

Named to the drafting committee were Dean F. E. Price, Oregon State University; Robert W. Schoning, state fisheries director; P. W. Schneider, Game Commission director; and Chris L. Wheeler, state engineer.

The committee postponed adoption of a resolution submitted today by Wheeler which stated "the committee... recommends against enactment of the initiative petition at this time."

The resolution asked by Hatfield is to include a statement that both Fish and Game Commission biologists agree that there would be no benefit to the fish run if the initiative were adopted.

The statement also is to point out that there is a "user interest" conflict between sports and commercial fishermen, and that minor changes in present regulations would allow the Fish Commission to more rigidly control the Columbia salmon and steelhead escapements.

Wheeler and Schoning apparently wanted the resolution enacted today. But Schneider insisted he felt the Game Commission should remain neutral, and not make a recommendation.

Pointing to the running conflict between the Game and Fish Commissions over management of the fishery resource, Hatfield said, "This is a rare occasion when both the fish and game biologists agree that there would be no biological gain from the initiative."

Unander may head Goldwater group in state

PORTLAND (UPI) — Former State Treasurer Sig Unander may be appointed Oregon chairman of the Goldwater for President Committee in the next few days.

State Republican Chairman Phil Roth said Wednesday he heard the reports last weekend at a meeting of the Republican National Committee in Washington.

Unander, who announced Wednesday that he will run for a berth on the state's delegation to the Republican national convention, said he had not talked to Goldwater about the job. But he added:

"I would be flattered to be asked." Richard Kleindienst, former Arizona Republican state chairman and now a Goldwater field man, is scheduled to arrive in Portland Monday.

Unander declined to say if he planned to talk to Kleindienst, but he admitted he probably would talk to Goldwater officials "in due time."

"I am going to vote for him in the primary and I expect him to be elected President in November," Unander said of the Arizona senator.

"I have the highest personal regard for Mr. Goldwater in both his public and private life."

You need two ears (both of them working for you) to tell which directions sounds come from. Ask about our new, low cost hearing aids that give you hearing in both ears.
