Danes have humor, history in abundance

By Borge Mors
UPI Staff Writer

COPENHAGEN (UPI) — The tiny kingdom of Denmark, producer of famous bacon and beauties, has no raw materials but such prosperity that the political opposition could find no better slogan than "make good times better."

And the Danes who inhabit this tight peninsula have humor, history and appetites in abundance.

Denmark is the land of William Shakespeare's "Hamlet," of Hans Christian Andersen, the famous author of children's fairy tales, and of pianist-comedian Victor Borge. And many of its women have become famous all over the world as models and actresses.

Danes have a reputation of taking almost nothing seriously —except eating. Tourists are introduced to such gourmet's delights as restaurants in Copenhagen with menus four feet long.

Ever since World War I Denmark has been a favorite country of American tourists, who swarm here the year round but particularly in the summer.

Tourism contributes importantly to the nation's income and accounts for more than 5 per cent of Denmark's foreign exchange. The monetary is the krone, which is valued at a little more than 14 cents, roughly the same as the British shilling.

Education is Compulsory

Visiting Americans are delighted to find that most Danes except in the remotest farming communities speak English. It is a required language in Danish elementary schools. Education is compulsory and Denmark is highly literate.

The Danes are seafarers and trade keeps them prosperous. Denmark's merchant fleet, one of the largest in the world, follows the tradition of the Danes' adventurous forefathers, the Vikings.

Danish ships carry valuable cargoes around the world. Denmark exports more butter and produces more bacon than any country except the United States.

The tiny kingdom, only 22 miles long and 165 miles wide, covers 16,576 square miles, an area twice the size of Massachusetts, but supports a population of 4,650,000 and finds room for 3.5 million cows, 6 million pigs and 25 million fowl.

The nation's farms and her merchant fleet, joined in recent years by rapid industrialization overcame Denmark's complete lack of raw materials. On a per capita basis, little Denmark is the world's greatest trading nation.

World's Oldest Kingdom

The Danes are proud that they have the world's oldest kingdom, the world's oldest flag —the red and white "Dannebrog"—and have been under the same royal family for more than 1,000 years. The king is Frederick IX, 64, who succeeded to the throne on the death of his father, King Christian X, on April 20, 1947.

Politically, the King and Parliament jointly share legislative powers. A new constitution, modernizing the one of 1849, was signed June 5, 1963, Denmark's Constitution Day.

It made women eligible to succeed to the throne. King Frederick has no sons. The eldest of his three daughters, Princess Margrethe, 23, is in line to succeed him.

The Evangelical Lutheran is the established religion, but there is complete religious tolerance.

The 1960 election, in which one party could promise no more than to "make good times better," wiped the Communists out of the Folketing, Denmark's unicameral Parliament, and renewed the pre-war coalition between the Social Democrats and radical liberals.

Except for during the war years and a short post-war interval, the two parties jointly have governed Denmark since 1929 and created a model welfare state.

Denmark has public assistance, health insurance, disability and old-age pensions, workmen's compensation and unemployment insurance.

POSTPONES WEDDING

DEN BURG, Holland (UPI)— The civil marriage of A. Boogaard and Miss J. Bekker was held up because the officiating civil servant's pen went dry and no ink could be found to validate the wedding.

The ceremony was postponed long enough for a clerk to go out and buy a bottle of ink to sign the marriage licnese.

Ailing girl, 16, brought from primitive area

CASCADE, Idaho (UPI) — Hazel-eyed Peggy Green, 16, was finally warm and comfortable here today while waiting a doctor's decision on her ailment.

Peggy spent 22 hours in the cold, snow-blown edge of Idaho's primitive area, between here and Yellow Pine, Sunday night after her father, Leonard, had attempted to rush her to the Valley County hospital.

The girl and her father, along with her brother and an unidentified man, tried to drive the 63 miles from Yellow Pine to Cascade to get the girl to a doctor. They had used a radio-telephone Sunday to alert the hospital that the girl apparently suffered from an appendicitis attack.

Using two vehicles to break through the snow, the party became bogged down early Monday and was stranded half the night.

The girl was put in a pickup truck cab with her father while her brother and the family friend rode in a four - wheel drive jeep.

Rescue efforts from Cascade had failed until a caterpillar tractor belonging to the J. R. Morgan Logging Co. managed to push a trail through the Yellow Pine road and found the stranded party.

HITS LONGSHOT

LONDON (UPI) — C. Ellis came up with a million-to-one winner in the soccer pools here. He won $35,000 for accurately forecasting six scores in last week's games. His investment was almost 4 U.S. cents.
