

Public apology on service given by West Coast

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Complaints of poor airline service to communities in Oregon, Washington and Utah led to a public apology Thursday by a spokesman for West Coast Airlines.

Raymond J. Rasenberger, attorney for the airline, made the apology before the Civil Aeronautics Board after listening to a series of complaints from spokesmen for the communities.

The cities were faced with possible loss of air services under the CAB's "use it or lose it" policy. But they complained that passengers were being driven away by poor service by West Coast.

Rasenberger said many of the complaints were "completely justified" if they dealt with the latter part of last year.

"We're sorry," he said. The West Coast spokesman said the airline had been working to improve its service and promised that many of the deficiencies would not happen again.

The apology came shortly after the board heard complaints of poor service to the Oregon cities of Salem, Pendleton, Burns and Lakeview. Similar complaints were made by spokesmen for Cut Bank, Mont., Logan, Utah, and Spokane, Wash.

Asst. Attorney General Richard W. Sabin, appearing for the Oregon Public Utilities Commission, said West Coast Airlines suffered from the "disease of longhauls" which prevented it from providing adequate service to the Oregon communities.

As an example of poor service, Sabin cited schedules between Portland and the communities of Burns and Lakeview. West Coast, he said, delivered passengers from the smaller communities to Portland at 4:30 p.m. and scheduled flights back at 7:30 a.m. He said this meant that anyone with business in Portland had to spend two nights there.

William J. Juza, city attorney for Salem, said plans to drop United Air Lines service to the Oregon capital were "untimely." At the same time, he said, if West Coast was not being used there was no reason not to eliminate it.

Juza blamed West Coast's problems on the airline's own inactivity and failure to provide better scheduling and service. West Coast, he said, was known in Salem as the "day-late and dollar-short airline."

Lofton L. Tatum, speaking for Portland, said the Oregon city needed both the local service to smaller cities and a nonstop service to Spokane.

George W. Shoemaker, representing Spokane, said the city needed the long-haul traffic provided by United Air Lines and that West Coast could not meet that need.

"West Coast is a nice little carrier and does a nice job," he said, "but it can't help in our long haul problems."

Warning given on kite flying

Parents of youngsters who will be flying kites this spring are again urged by Pacific Power & Light Company to warn their boys and girls to stay in open fields away from power lines and to be certain the control strings are not fine wire or string with metallic strands woven in for strength.

"And never let them fly a kite with a wet string or when it is raining," PP&L warns. "They also should be discouraged from using any metal clip or light metal for braces in fashioning their kites, for these can create hazardous situations and occasionally area power outages if they tangle in power lines," warned the company's manager, R. G. McFarland.

He said youngsters should especially be cautioned against climbing into trees or power line poles if their kites become entangled.

UP FOR GRABS—The Stimeister trophy pictured above is new to the Winter Carnival this year. It will be presented each year to the school of the individual racer who wins the highest point total in the meet. David Yaden, right, is the director of the intercollegiate carnival and Jerry Leagield is delegate coordinator. Jerry is from Bend and a senior at Portland State College in Portland.

Noticeable lack of convention candidates seen

SALEM (UPI)—With the filing deadline but 14 days off, there is a noticeable lack of candidates for delegate to the Democratic and Republican national conventions.

Democrats will elect 22 delegates, 14 from the state at large, and two from each congressional district. The national committee and committee woman automatically are delegates to the Democratic convention, giving Oregon 24 votes.

The Republicans will have 18 votes. They will elect 10 delegates from the state at large, and two from each congressional district.

As of this morning, only three Democrats had filed for the 14 state at large openings, and one had filed to represent the 4th district. None had filed for the other three districts.

On the Republican side, the situation was almost as bleak.

Both Short So Far

Eight have filed for the 10 state at large openings, and one each for the first and second districts. The third district boasts four candidates, and the fourth district four.

Thus the Democrats were short 18 candidates, and the Republicans four.

Both Gov. Mark Hatfield and Secretary of State Howell Appling Jr. are expected to file as delegates to the Republican convention.

With the Republican convention this year in San Francisco, a last-minute rush of candidates can be expected.

There may not be so many competing for seats on the larger Democratic delegation, because their convention will be held in Atlantic City.

Delegates have to pay their own way at political conventions.

Also, many expect the Democratic convention to be a hot affair, with the selection of a vice presidential candidate the major job.

The Republicans, on the other hand, are faced with the possibility of a wide-open battle for both the presidential and vice presidential nominations.

Woman loses damage action

An attempt by a Stayton woman to collect $80,000 general damages and $700 special damages from an Idaho man, as the result of an automobile accident, came to naught, Thursday in circuit court for Deschutes county.

The plaintiff, Mrs. Jeanette Sullivan, brought the damage action against Alonzo R. Miller, Caldwell. Mrs. Sullivan was a passenger in an automobile operated by her twin sister and involved in an accident June 4, 1962, 40 miles west of Burns.

The plaintiff's sister was attempting to pass the defendant's vehicle, when the collision occurred.

A jury of seven men and five women retired at 12:17 p.m., after being instructed by Judge Robert H. Foley. They brought in a verdict for the defendant at 2:30 p.m., with time out for lunch. Arguments were heard yesterday morning and Wednesday afternoon. The jury was drawn Wednesday morning.

Donald M. Iverson, Redmond, was jury foreman. Other jurors were Fayet A. Scoggin, Billy Martin, Howard C. Kauffman and Annie L. Haddon, also of Redmond; William J. Hall, Terrebonne; Ruby Jane Millard, W. E. Roats, Jewel M. Whitehead, Aubrey A. Fitzgerald, Marjorie L. Ettinger and Mildred S. Hendricks.

Zoning action taken at Madras

SPECIAL TO THE BULLETIN

MADRAS — A comprehensive new zoning ordinance for the city of Madras was adopted by the city council this week after the final hearing brought no remonstrances from the public to any of the provisions of the 28 page document.

Only one city resident, not a member of either the city council or the city planning commission, appeared at the hearing. City spokesmen described the adoption of the new ordinance as the culmination of a long project that had been underway for about eight years with intensive work on the zoning plan conducted by the Anniversary celebration set

The Bend Eagles will celebrate their 38th anniversary this weekend, with initiation of over 100 new members, recognition of long-time members and a crab feed.

The initiation will be held at the Friday night meeting, which will be held at 8 o'clock. Afterward there will be a free lunch and dancing, with music by M. L. Shepherd.

The crab feed will be Saturday night starting at 6:30, with all Eagles and their ladies invited. Music for dancing will begin at 9:30, with Frank Francis, Louise Edwards and James Shiek to provide the music.

Initiation of the large class will bring the membership of the local aerie to well over 1,200 members.

Carl Berg of Toledo, vice-president of the Oregon State Aerie, will be the Friday night speaker, according to Cy Burdett, local president. Oscar Melin will be in charge of the meeting, which will also honor 57 members who will be presented with their 20-year pins.

All candidates are to check in at the aerie office by 7:30 p.m. Entertainment will be provided for the women in the Tropic Aerie room, while the business meeting is in session.

Many state aerie leaders are expected to be in Bend this weekend to help the local aerie celebrate, according to Harry O'Grady, state aerie chaplain.

Grange opposes state sales tax

Pine Forest Grange, at a recent meeting, went on record as opposing a sales tax for the state of Oregon.

A letter written by a resident of the state of Washington, and published in the Oregon State Grange Bulletin, was read.

The letter stated that the initial three per cent sales tax has been raised to four per cent, and covers "every stich you wear, every bite you eat, medicine for your sick baby, materials and labor for a needed addition to your house, and a double tax on a new car."

The writer concluded with the admonition, "Stop and take a good look northward, Oregonians!"
