Landlord's wife turns hose on tenant, infant

Mrs. Elmer Hill, Redmond, co-defendant in a tenant versus landlord suit, admitted spraying David E. Shoemaker with a garden hose. But, she said, she didn't notice he was holding a baby.

The case was heard Thursday afternoon in Judge Robert H. Foley's circuit court for Deschutes County. A jury of nine women and three men deliberated 55 minutes, and awarded the plaintiffs $1,500 general damages.

The plaintiffs, Mr. and Mrs. Shoemaker, sought $5,000 general damages and $5,000 punitive damages. They charged Mr. and Mrs. Hill, the defendants, with various malicious acts, while and after the Shoemakers were tenants in an apartment house managed by the Hills.

Mrs. Hill admitted turning the garden hose on the Shoemakers' bed, through an open window. She also admitted helping to make warning signs, which were posted on the Shoemakers' car when they visited other tenants in the apartment, after the plaintiffs had moved out. But, she said, the smearing of the car with marshmallow syrup was the idea of someone else.

Lou Shive, Redmond, was jury foreman. Other jurors were Forrest L. Yeoman and Ernest C. Russell, also of Redmond; William B. Sharp, LaPine, and the following Bend residents: Wynnona Zemke, Anna Mae Richards, Evelyn R. Samples, Irene Sholes, Anna L. Oldaker, Mildred S. Hendricks, Marjorie L. Ettinger and Jewel M. Whitehead.

High cost seen in proposed use of naval station

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Higher operating costs eventually would wipe out initial savings resulting from use of the abandoned Tongue Point naval station at Astoria, Ore., as an Indian school, a Senate appropriations subcommittee was told today.

Philleo Nash, commissioner of Indian affairs, also told the committee that most of the 1,000 students at the proposed school would come from New Mexico and Arizona. The admission that any savings from use of the former Navy installation would be wiped out within 10 years by higher operation and maintenance costs was made during questioning by Sen. F. L. Bartlett, D-Alaska.

The bureau has requested permission of both the Senate and House appropriation committees to use available funds to convert Tongue Point into an Indian school.

While expressing the bureau's preference for building "from scratch" Nash said the conversion would cost about $4.9 million and that it would cost at least $7.5 million for equivalent new construction.

Nash estimated operation and maintenance costs at about $500,000 a year as compared with $200,000 to $300,000 for new construction.

"Then the savings would be erased in less than 10 years by added cost of operation," Bartlett asked.

"Yes, sir," Nash replied. The commissioner said most of the students would be drawn from the Southwest states because that area has the largest number of students over the age of 18. By sending older students to schools such as the proposed Tongue Point facility, Nash said, more space would be made available for younger students at boarding schools nearer their homes.

Eventually, Nash said, it was hoped to build cottages at Tongue Point and to increase the number of students by another 1,000. This, he said, would reduce the per student cost of operation.

'64 Corvair Monza by Chevrolet

It's got a frisky new engine (that puts superior traction under you)

Ever see a Corvair wearing tire chains? Not likely. And it's not often you'll find a Corvair owner bothering to switch over to snow tires either. Why? Rear-engine traction. The engine weight over Corvair's rear wheels gives them remarkable gripping power without any assist from special winter driving paraphernalia. Reassuring to know this time of year—and also in the months to come when all that tidy white countryside turns into a melting pot that's likely to add to the misery. Another thing about Corvair's engine: It's bigger this year.

Nearly 19 per cent more power in the standard version. Which is something you'll appreciate most any time of year, fair weather or foul. You'll also appreciate not having to fool around with antifreeze. And not having to flush the radiator or fuss with hose connections. The engine's air cooled. Matter of fact, we have a feeling that if more people knew what a cinch Corvair makes winter driving, there wouldn't be quite so many looking for excuses to duck South this time every year. But then you never know. Corvair's a kick to drive in warm weather, too. Why not try one at your dealer's and decide for yourself?
