

STARTED 30 YEARS AGO — Japanese Doll Day at Reid-Thompson Elementary School in Bend started 30 years ago as a World Friendship project. The first year dolls were exchanged between the two lands. Tomorrow local girls will bring their own dolls, and educational materials about Japan will be presented. A similar program will be held today in Japan. Teachers looking at Japanese art objects hundreds of years old are from the left Eda Williams, Bend school teacher for 30 years, now retired, Evelyn Brookings, Reid-Thompson, and Stella Chlopek, Reid-Thompson.

Soviet trawler trails American convoy into waters off Formosa

TAIPEI, Formosa (UPI) — A 115-ship U.S. Navy convoy arrived here today for joint U.S.-Nationalist Chinese maneuvers, trailed from Okinawa by a Soviet trawler.

Fifteen thousand U.S. and Chinese Marines stormed ashore in landing exercises while President Chiang Kai-shek and U.S. military leaders watched.

There was no indication that the Soviet trawler was nearby when the maneuvers began. But it had followed the convoy with electronic gear from the time it left Okinawa.

An Okinawa newsman, Robert Prosser, reported from one of the convoy ships Monday that

Hoffa draws reprimand from judge

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (UPI) — Teamsters President James R. Hoffa was sharply reprimanded today by Federal Judge Frank Wilson for "extremely loud" corridor statements.

Before today's session began in Hoffa's jury tampering trial, the Teamsters president loudly renewed his attack that the government was "like the Gestapo" in spying on him. His charges were made in a hallway near Wilson's courtroom.

When Wilson took his place on the bench, he said he had heard Hoffa in the hallways outside his courtroom, despite closed doors.

"Something has to be done to protect the jury" from noise, Wilson said. The jury had not entered the room at the time.

"Let's discontinue these extremely loud arguments both inside and outside the court," Wilson told Hoffa and his attorneys who remained seated at the defense table.

Hoffa nodded acknowledgment. A final round of arguments was scheduled today before the trial, now in its seventh week, goes to a 12-member jury. Hoffa and five others are on trial here on charges of trying to fix a Nashville, Tenn., federal jury which heard conspiracy charges against Hoffa in 1962.

Special government prosecutor John J. Hooker, Sr., was scheduled to wind up the government's case today, charging the husky labor leader as the "quarterback" of the alleged jury rigging.

Ports freed from penalties

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Johnson has signed a bill exempting the Port of Seattle, Port of Portland and several other ports from civil penalties which could have been imposed for signing terminal leases without prior approval from the Federal Maritime Commission, Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., announced Monday.

Magnuson was the author of the legislation. Until passage of the bill, it was possible for the commission to levy penalties ranging up to $1,000 per day against violators.

Report on Alpine crash blames action of pilot

INNSBRUCK, Austria (UPI) — The commission investigating the Alpine crash of a British airliner that killed 83 persons Saturday said today the pilot tried to land without instruments in weather conditions that made such a landing impossible.

The commission, in a preliminary report issued at Vienna, said there was no indication of any technical failure.

But it said that Edward Williams, pilot of the Bristol Britannia which crashed near Innsbruck, tried to land in foggy, cloudy weather without navigational aids.

The passengers' four-engine Paradise Airlines Constellation plane vanished shortly before noon Sunday while approaching the Tahoe Valley Airport in a blinding snowstorm. The tangled wreckage, partially covered by a mantle of white, was found early Monday near the top of an 8,700-foot Sierra Nevada ridge eight miles north of the airport.

An Air Force helicopter made the first sighting shortly after a massive search for the missing airliner began at dawn. A second helicopter landed at the scene and confirmed that all of the 81 passengers and four crewmen were dead.

Douglas County Sheriff George Byers led a jeep party into the crash scene and left two deputies to guard the wreckage throughout the night, while work crews cut a road through the rugged terrain.

The sheriff said they would not remove the victims until after this morning's arrival of an official from the Federal Bureau of Investigation and another from the Civil Aeronautics Board.

"It will be at least noon before we start working with the bodies," Byers said. He added that they would be taken to Minden and Carson City, where the FBI will aid in identification.

BABY AWAITED
LONDON (UPI) — Queen Elizabeth's midwife moved into Buckingham Palace for the fourth time Monday night to prepare for the birth of the Queen's baby.

The Queen is expecting her fourth child in about two weeks.

MacArthur was assigned to the hospital's special executive suite, which usually is reserved for Presidents and other high-ranking dignitaries. President Dwight D. Eisenhower stayed there during his illness attack.

The White House said that Johnson had telephoned MacArthur upon learning that the general had been feeling ill. Press Secretary Pierre Salinger said that after talking with MacArthur the President arranged with Maj. Gen. Leonard D. Heaton, Army surgeon general and commandant of Walter Reed, for the general's admission.

In his last public appearance — a birthday dinner on Jan. 28 — MacArthur appeared in robust health. On that occasion, he was honored by a delegation of cadets from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point where he had served as one of the youngest superintendents in history.

Since 1951, when he was summarily recalled by President Harry S. Truman as commander of U. S. and Allied forces in Korea, MacArthur has lived in semi-retirement in a New York hotel. He has spent much of his time writing his memoirs scheduled for fall publication.

Grim ordeal of recovering bodies begins

TAHOE VALLEY, Calif. (UPI) — Authorities today began the task of recovering the frozen bodies of 85 Californians whose "fun flight" to Lake Tahoe ended just 30 feet below the summit of a snow-swept Nevada mountain.

The passengers' four-engine Paradise Airlines Constellation plane vanished shortly before noon Sunday while approaching the Tahoe Valley Airport in a blinding snowstorm. The tangled wreckage, partially covered by a mantle of white, was found early Monday near the top of an 8,700-foot Sierra Nevada ridge eight miles north of the airport.

Soviets have no plans to leave talks in Geneva

GENEVA (UPI) — Soviet Ambassador Semyon K. Tsarapkin said today the 17-nation disarmament conference is in a "very, very serious impasse" but that Russia has no plans to leave the talks.

Talking with newsmen after today's conference plenary session, Tsarapkin echoed Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko's statement Monday that the West is to blame for the lack of progress in reaching new agreements.

"There is a real impasse because the United States refuses to genuinely consider our proposals," Tsarapkin said.

Asked how long the Soviet Union would stay in Geneva if the deadlock continues, Tsarapkin added:

"Why do you always ask me that? That is no problem, no question at all. We are stubborn in this and will stay here and keep working for agreement."

He charged the United States with making only proposals which would permit the fighting of a nuclear war until the very end of any disarmament process.

Tsarapkin's speech to the conference, however, was markedly softer in tone.

OTI president opposes change in train service

KLAMATH FALLS (UPI) — The president of Oregon Technical Institute told an Interstate Commerce Commission hearing Monday he was opposed to Southern Pacific's plan to discontinue all but summer runs on its Shasta Daylight service.

Winston Purvine testified at the Klamath Falls portion of the three-part hearing, which began in San Francisco and continues in Portland Wednesday.

He said his school favored use of the train for economy reasons when sending personnel to meetings in Salem, Ore., and Portland.

Others who voiced opposition included Mayor Warren D. McDaniel of Mt. Shasta, Calif., and Floyd Wynne, managing editor of the Klamath Falls Herald and News and a director of the Klamath County Chamber of Commerce.

Funny thing happened to him on way to work

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (UPI) — Funny thing happened to truck driver Richard Poling on his way to work Monday morning.

He saw a chimpanzee in the street, the early-morning traffic edging carefully around the animal.

Poling parked and tried to "talk" the chimp out of the street.

Then the chimp darted to Poling's truck and into the cab — and threw his arms around the truck driver.

Poling drove the chimp to nearby Jungleland, where grateful attendants identified the animal as "Bill."

First family joins mourners

NEW YORK (UPI) — The first family of the land today led public mourning for the late first lady of New York City, Mrs. Robert F. Wagner.

The mayor's wife, Susan, 54, died Monday of lung cancer. Her death shocked the city who knew nothing of her year-long battle to overcome the disease.

Despite the fact the city's first lady shied away from the public spotlight, there was profound grief over her death from her fellow New Yorkers.

Her husband, mayor since 1954, and her two sons, Robert Jr., 20, and Duncan, 17, were at her bedside when she died.

The mayor had kept the seriousness of his wife's illness a secret, even from his two sons until they completed their mid-year college exams.

President and Mrs. Johnson sent their condolences. Expressing his sorrow the President said:

"Lady Bird and I are shocked by the death of Susan. I know of your deep devotion for her and the support and strength she has been to you in your private and public life. Our hearts go out to you on this sad occasion."

BOSSIE IN THE WELL
CAMBRIDGE, Ill. (UPI) — Old Bossie was doing quite well today, thank you, after being pulled from a 38-foot well with the help of an auto wrecker.

Farmer Robert Hunter said he gave the cow a shot of penicillin and a pint of whiskey after her ordeal.

Membership in Black Muslims wouldn't save Clay from draft

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Selective Service spokesman said today a man could not qualify for draft exemption as a conscientious objector merely by claiming membership in a religious body opposed to violence.

He made the statement when asked about reports that heavy-weight boxing champion Cassius Clay might try to avoid military service on the ground that he is a member of the Black Muslim sect.

The spokesman said that Selective Service did not have any "blanket policy" toward Black Muslims, or members of any other religious group.

"All applications for conscientious objector classification are handled on an individual basis, just like applications for occupation deferment," he said.

Membership Not Enough
"Membership in a religious body which teaches pacifistic views is one piece of evidence which a man might submit to help establish his claim to be a conscientious objector. But it is not enough by itself.

"Nor is it necessary to be a member of any church to make the claim. The law states only that the objection must be based on religious training and belief rather than on political or philosophical views, or personal moral codes.

The spokesman pointed out that there might be bona fide conscientious objectors in any religious group, and, conversely, some members of traditionally pacifist groups do not oppose military service.

Unaware Of Test Case
He said he was not aware of any "test case" involving the position of the Black Muslims toward military service.

"I'm sure the question must have come up before local draft boards a number of times," he said, "but I've never heard of its reaching national headquarters."

The draft official said it was unlikely that Selective Service boards would question the Black Muslims' status as a religious body, even though Islamic scholars have challenged the sect's right to use the name and symbols of the historic religion founded by the Prophet Mohammed in the 6th century.

Game rangers plagued by 1,750 tipsy elephants

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Harassed game rangers in South Africa's famed Kruger National Park are trying to cope with 1,750 tipsy elephants.

The elephants have been disgracefully drunk for the last five weeks from eating the yellow fruit of the marula trees which dot the game reserve.

Elephants, it seems, are rarely mean drunks but their alcoholic hijinks already have put one man in a hospital and their annual binge has another week or two to run.

The marula bears fruit for six or seven weeks each year. It has a cloyingly sweet, very rich flavor. Africans use it to brew a particularly potent beverage.

7 COME 11
HONOLULU (UPI) — Police broke up a rolling crap game Monday among off-duty bus drivers cruising in a Honolulu rapid transit company bus. The bus was number 711.
