Smith in line of chairmanship of state GOP

PORTLAND (UPI) — Oregon Republicans were expected to select former Gov. Elmo Smith as their state chairman today at a meeting of the State Central Committee.

He would succeed Phillip J. Roth, a Portland attorney who resigned to run for Multnomah County Circuit Court judge. Smith is publisher of the Albany Democrat - Herald and owns interests in several weekly newspapers around the state.

The committee also must pick a successor to treasurer Joseph Burns of Hermiston, who resigned to manage the campaign of Willard Cromwell for the Republican nomination for Congress from the 2nd District.

The central committee meeting is one of a number of Republican activities here this weekend.

The Multnomah County Republican Pre - Primary Convention is under way nearby. Delegates today were scheduled to consider a platform drafted by 11 committees Thursday and Friday nights. Sen. Carl T. Curtis, R-Neb., was the speaker at a luncheon at noon.

The Oregon Republican Club Friday night heard Orlo M. Brees, executive secretary of the State Central Committee, discuss the differences in Republican and Democratic approaches to governmental problems.

Brees said those problems could be approached with a motive of providing opportunity for either personal profit or personal power. He said Republicans want the opportunity for individual profit or gain, provided the system is kept under control.

That leads to the free enterprise system, he said, while the other leads to socialism.

"When government seeks control, freedom goes down the drain," he said. "It's been that way for the last 30 years."

Storage water outlook good in Crook County

Special to The Bulletin

PRINEVILLE — With the beginning of spring and the start of the busy season for farms and ranches, the storage water outlook in the Crook County area is very good for the season's irrigation work according to Gus Woods, county agricultural agent.

Woods noted that the soil is getting very dry with the prolonged lack of seasonal rains. Strong dry winds, coming almost daily are adding to the problem, he said, and some ranchers may have to do preseason irrigating.

Quite an amount of the 1963 potato crop is still in storage locally, Woods said due in part to market conditions during the winter. Spud acreage on the county ranches is expected, however, to be about the same as last year or slightly lower.

Winter grain, he said, is coming through in fine shape, but here again spring rains are needed by the farmers. The annual lambing and calving is almost over for the year, he said. Across the county, wherever and whenever weather permits, the spring work of plowing and harrowing, ditch - cleaning and land - leveling is underway.

Farmers of the county, Woods noted, are keenly interested in the present activity in Congress towards allocation of funds for construction of a major extension on the Ochoco Irrigation project. A considerable farm acreage in the Prineville area will be brought under water when the project extension is constructed.

Indian poetry discussion topic

Central Oregon College's weekly radio hour this Wednesday presents a program by Dr. Eli Jenkins, "A Short Look At American Indian Poetry."

COC's radio hour starts at 6:30 every Wednesday on KBND.

Dr. Jenkins research discloses that the amount of available American Indian poetry is very limited since a great amount of the poetry was passed on from generation to generation verbally, and is not recorded.

Multiple use development of public lands is urged

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The National Advisory Board Council of the Bureau of Land Management urged Friday that public lands be devoted to the maximum possible multiple use rather than just single use.

The 42-member council also proposed in a series of resolutions at the end of a three-day meeting that it be given authority to conduct an informational campaign on the use of public lands and their importance to the Western economy.

The council, representing various business and public interests involved in the use of public lands, meets periodically in an advisory capacity to the director of the Bureau of Land Management and the secretary of the interior.

Among its proposals at the end of this week's meeting were:

—That officials strive for the maximum amount of multiple use of public lands, rather than devoting the lands to single uses. Observers felt this point was related to bills in Congress to set aside and preserve parts of the public lands as a national wilderness.

—That the council be authorized as a government agency to conduct an informational campaign. Members of the council were understood to feel that the public, particularly in the eastern part of the country, was not aware of the importance of the public lands in the West, nor of various conservation activities that are being undertaken.

—That withdrawals of public lands be held to a minimum.

—That in order for public lands to be used by all the people, the government take additional steps to post and identify them. Officials said such steps already are being taken.

Represented on the council are representatives of the livestock, oil and mining, logging and lumber industries, as well as spokesmen for state and local governments, reclamation and wildlife, recreation and other public interest officials.
