Curtis refused new libel trial

ATLANTA (UPI)—A federal judge today refused to grant the Curtis Publishing Co. a new trial in a multi-million-dollar libel suit by Wallace Butts, former University of Georgia football coach.

Federal District Judge Lewis R. Morgan turned down Curtis on its claims that it had turned up new evidence and on a new contention that Butts was a public official.

Morgan ruled that the purported new evidence would not have changed the outcome of the case and said Butts could not possibly have been legally classified as a public official while serving as athletic director at the University of Georgia.

Ralph Dickinson, 718 E. Second Street, Sharen Nehoda gave a demonstration. Others present were Cynthia Champagne, Teresa Lowe and Barbara Barackman.

Barry finishing two-day Oregon primary swing

PORTLAND (UPI)—Claiming former Vice President Richard M. Nixon would be his ultimate opponent, Alaska Sen. Barry Goldwater today was winding up a two-day campaign for Oregon's primary votes.

He was scheduled to address students at Oregon State University at Corvallis, then go to Salem for a luncheon speech to the American Plywood Association convention. He was to fly back to Washington after leaving Salem.

Of Nixon, Goldwater said "we differ most in the area of the welfare state."

However, he said he would differ less with Nixon than he would with New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller, Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge or Pennsylvania Gov. William Scranton.

He said "when Nixon was in the Senate, we voted together 85 to 90 per cent of the time."

He said neither Nixon nor Maine Sen. Margaret Chase Smith could be termed "me too" candidates.

All are on Oregon's May 15 Republican presidential primary ballot.

Goldwater termed the Oregon primary "very, very important," but later said a Lodge victory in Oregon would not be significant.

Wyatt co-author of two articles

Ellis Wyatt, assistant professor of biological sciences at Central Oregon College, is co-author of articles which have appeared in two recent publications.

Wyatt is the senior author of an article in a late issue of the "Journal of Parasitology," which describes a new protozoan parasite which the local professor discovered while employed as a fish disease biologist for the Oregon State Fish Commission. Wyatt, and co-author Dr. Ivan Pratt, professor of invertebrate zoology and parasitology at Oregon State University, detail the study which Wyatt conducted in locating the parasite which has been and still is causing disease in spring chinook salmon fingerlings in the McKenzie River and South Santiam River Hatcheries. It was not until Wyatt discovered the new protozoan parasite that the mysterious cause of this disease was accounted for.

The second article which Wyatt co-authored and which appeared in Vol. 9, No. 1 of the Oregon Fish Commission's "Research Briefs," considers the length-weight relationship of young silver salmon which have been reared at Oregon Fish Commission Hatcheries. Senior author of the article is David A. Leith, aquatic biologist for the Oregon Fish Commission.
