Hop-scotching tornadoes stir sand storms

By United Press International Hop-scotching tornadoes played a game of death and destruction across the Southern Plains Sunday, stirred up some of the worst sand storms since dust bowl days and left at least 19 persons dead.

Scores of persons were injured and hundreds of homes were wrecked or damaged.

One of the hardest hit areas in the tornado belt was the southwestern Iowa hamlet of Yorktown. A twister tore a two-mile swath of destruction down the main street, left an elderly woman dying in the rubble of her home and damaged nearly every other building in town. Twenty-eight persons were injured.

A dozen other tornadoes in Iowa, Kansas and Missouri killed five more persons and wrought widespread destruction.

Sky-scraping sand and dust storms blotted out the sun in Oklahoma and raged across the Texas Panhandle. At least eight persons died in traffic accidents blamed on the swirling sand.

Screaming winds and hail storms thundered over the Plains until late in the day. Three persons drowned and two others were missing and presumed dead when high winds capsized their small boat at Lake Tawakoni, Tex.

O.G. Smith, editor of the Higgins (Tex.) News, said the dust storm there was "one of the worst storms since the dust bowl days of the 1930s." Residents at Wichita Falls, Tex., said the blighting dust looked like a giant wall as it bore down on the city.

Clam survival study planned

OLYMPIA, Wash. (UPI) — A team of fisheries department technicians will hit the beaches near Moclips with the low tide this week to try to find out how many clams survived last month's killing oil spill.

Assistant Fisheries Director J. E. Lasater said results of the tests would determine if an eight-mile stretch of beach could be reopened soon to clam diggers.

"It will all depend upon the abundance of clams in that area," Lasater said. If there is a sufficient number of clams, digging can be permitted to resume.

But, Lasater said, if there are only a few clams left, the ban on digging will be maintained to make sure that the clams which survived the oil will live to reproduce.

Sen. Holland raps rights measure as 'force bill'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A southern senator denounced the Senate's pending civil rights bill as a "force bill" today and said it is really as unenforceable as the 18th Amendment and prohibition.

Sen. Spessard Holland, D-Fla., was the lead-off speaker as the Senate, meeting at 10 a.m., began its sixth week of civil rights debate. Before the bill was taken up two weeks ago, three weeks were consumed with talk over whether the measure should be formally considered.

Longer hours were in prospect in discussions of the bill's provisions which are designed to help bar discrimination in education, employment and in facilities offering accommodations to the public. Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., floor manager for the measure, said the Senate would be meeting at 10 or earlier.

Shortly after the Senate began its 29th day of civil rights debate Humphrey announced that today's session may last "as late as midnight" and cautioned members to be on hand for quorum calls.

The prospects of ending discussion on the sweeping measure were gloomy, according to two civil rights advocates. Sens. Joseph S. Clark, D-Pa., and Jacobs K. Javits, R-N.Y., agreed that any attempt now to cut off debate would fail.

The opening of the third week of formal debate on the House-approved legislation coincided with the official opening of the major league baseball season, but Humphrey promised that the Washington Senators-Los Angeles Angels game would have no effect on Senate business. Quorum calls will be held during the game, he said.

However, Humphrey said that two "long-ball speakers" would be recruited for the day's oratory. This suggested that Senate attendance at the ball park would be good.

Sen. George A. Smathers, D-Fla., was listed by Humphrey as a probable speaker. Sen. John G. Tower, R-Tex., also was ready with an 80-page speech on the fair employment practices section of the bill.

A request from the City Recreation Department for PTA volunteers to help in preparing the ball field adjoining the school for the laying of water lines was announced by Orval Boyle, principal. The field also serves as the school playground and it is hoped the grass can be planted this year. Several Saturday work projects are planned.

Refreshments were served by the fifth grade mothers with Mrs. Lloyd Macfarlane as chairman. Others on the committee were Mrs. Harvey Fortney, Mrs. Loren Holzhauser, Mrs. Richard Ansell, Mrs. Nel Loper, Mrs. Lorena Sexton, Mrs. George Skidmore, Mrs. Robert Davis and Mrs. William Marker.

Poland's Wladyslaw Gomulka lines up behind Nikita in his intra-party fight with Chinese

MOSCOW (UPI) — Polish Communist party leader Wladyslaw Gomulka publicly lined up with Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev today against Peking.

Flying in from Warsaw for what may be a restricted East European Communist summit meeting, Gomulka told Khrushchev at the airport.

"Our parties hold identical views on the tasks of the socialist camp, on the strategy and tactics of the international revolutionary workers' movement... the unity of the Communist camp is of paramount significance and actions directed against that unity are irresponsible and extremely harmful."

Other East European leaders were believed heading for Moscow to discuss the looming possibility of a breakup of world communism into rival Soviet and Chinese branches.

Gomulka's party, diplomats said, is a key factor in Moscow's attempt to control the direction of world communism.

Summit Not Mentioned The Polish leader's brief airport speech did not mention the Kremlin-proposed world Communist summit conference, which some of Khrushchev's allies apparently feared might formalize and make permanent the Sino-Soviet breach.

While otherwise supporting Khrushchev fully, the Polish party has apparently been dragging its feet on the world summit idea. Khrushchev confined his remarks at the airport to a declaration that "our parties work together for unity and cohesion of the international Communist movement."

Informed sources said the Communist leaders of East Germany and Czechoslovakia, Walter Ulbricht and Antonin Novotny, also would travel to take part in talks on how to deal with Communist China.

Gomulka and Polish Premier Josef Cyrankiewicz were here for the official purpose of celebrating Khrushchev's 70th birthday Friday. The sources said this reason also could be given for the trips of the other bloc leaders.

But the main reason, they said, is to plan the next move in Khrushchev's offensive against the rival leadership in Peking.

In a televised "fireside chat" Sunday, Khrushchev attacked Peking before a home audience for the first time since last November, when Moscow began its propaganda truce.

Khrushchev's speech, however, brought few surprises to Soviet viewers who had kept up with his anti-Peking barrages during his 10-day tour of Hungary this month.

Warning that China's attempt to split the world Communist ranks would cause "shameful disaster," Khrushchev called Peking's leaders Trotskyites, one of the worst labels in the Communist vocabulary since the late Leon Trotsky split with Stalin in the 1920's and set up a rival international.

At the same time, Khrushchev accused the Chinese of acting like Stalin.

Without naming names, he said the Chinese leaders "lay claim to a special role in the Socialist camp and the world Communist movement."

"They would like to restore the relations which prevailed during the Stalin personality cult in the relations between parties and countries," he added, in a reference to Stalin's demands of unquestioning obedience from his satellites.

"The Chinese splitters are in effect slipping into Trotskyite positions," Khrushchev said. "The Soviet Communist party and the Hungarian Socialist Workers' (Communist) party believe that it is imperative in the present situation to give a resolute rebuff to the subversive actions of the Chinese leaders."

The sources said Khrushchev's talks this week might determine what form that rebuff to the Chinese would take.
