Spring season delayed month in Crook County

PRINEVILLE — Cold nights and continued lack of rainfall have delayed the spring season in Crook county about a month, according to Gus Woods, county agricultural agent. Hardest hit are range operators waiting for the spring grass.

Heavy frosts continue night after night. Cold, dry winds, blowing almost daily, add to ranchers' problems, by drying out surface moisture he said. Each afternoon for some time clouds of dust from plowed fields have surrounded the Prineville area.

One bright note in the current ranch picture, it was noted, is the promise of a good supply of irrigation water from the Prineville and Ochoco reservoirs. Reservoirs are now filling rapidly as snow melts on the higher elevations.
