President Donald Trump arrives to speak at a rally in Washington on Wednesday. The gathering eventually devolved into what Sen. Mitt Romney and others characterized as an "insurrection" at the U.S. Capitol.

Trump supporters try to break through a police barrier Wednesday at the U.S. Capitol. As Congress prepared to affirm President-elect Joe Biden's victory, thousands of people gathered to show their support for the president and his claims of election fraud.

Local residents express outrage over D.C. chaos

'Our president is fanning the flames'

Bulletin staff report
On the day she started her first day in politics, taking the oath of office Wednesday along with three other newcomers to the Bend City Council, Rita Schenkelberg felt fear and passion for the job.

She wondered if it would be affected by the chaos in Washington, D.C., where an angry mob broke into the U.S. Capitol, clashed with police and prompted a building lockdown. Both chambers of Congress went into recess in the middle of the Electoral College vote. Law enforcement officers aimed weapons at intruders and tear gas floated through the Capitol Rotunda.

"How do you do your job if the whole time you are looking over your shoulder because you are scared people are going to storm the room?" Schenkelberg said.

But that fear doesn't make Schenkelberg want the job any less. See Reaction / A4

SALEM — Right-wing demonstrators and supporters of President Donald Trump rallied outside the Oregon State Capitol on Wednesday as part of a nationwide protest of the 2020 election results.

Protesters also took the opportunity to decry Gov. Kate Brown's COVID-19 emergency orders.

While the crowd of hundreds had largely dispersed after 2:30 p.m., video taken by the Salem Reporter earlier in the day showed violent clashes with counterprotesters that led Salem Police to declare an unlawful assembly. See Salem / A4

Violent Trump loyalists cleared from Capitol after forcing lawmakers out

Associated Press
A violent mob loyal to President Donald Trump stormed the U.S. Capitol on Wednesday and forced lawmakers into hiding, in a stunning attempt to overturn America's presidential election, undercut the nation's democracy and keep Democrat Joe Biden from replacing Trump in the White House.
The nation's elected representatives scrambled to crouch under desks and don gas masks, while police futilely tried to barricade the building, one of the most jarring scenes ever to unfold in a seat of American political power. A woman was shot and killed inside the Capitol, and Washington's mayor instituted an evening curfew in an attempt to contain the violence.
The rioters were egged on by Trump, who has spent weeks falsely attacking the integrity of the election and had urged his supporters to descend on Washington to protest Congress' formal approval of Biden's victory.
Some Republican lawmakers were in the midst of raising objections to the results on his behalf when the proceedings were abruptly halted by the mob.
Together, the protests and the GOP election objections amounted to an almost unthinkable challenge to American democracy and exposed the depths of the divisions that have coursed through the country during Trump's four years in office.

Joe Biden speaks from Wilmington, Delaware, on Wednesday. Biden — due to be sworn in as the next president in two weeks — called the violent protests on the U.S. Capitol "an assault on the most sacred of American undertakings: the doing of the people's business."
