The snowcat grooms wide trails for skate skiing and sets tracks for classic skiing simultaneously. The new snowcat has the ability to control the left and right tracks independently, which helps prevent the digging up of snow, and even dirt, on tight corners.

Even after pushing the cross-country season back to 2021, the Big Ten still must deal with the ramifications of the pandemic.

Michigan put its entire athletic department on pause this week after several positive tests for a new COVID-19 variant that transmits at a higher rate, which means the Wolverines won't be competing Saturday. Michigan finished third in the men's and women's divisions in 2019 but won three straight women's conference titles from 2016-18.

"In my opinion, the Big Ten championships without the Michigan men and women is a diluted championships," said Byrne, whose Badgers won the men's division and finished second to Michigan State in the women's division in 2019. Veatch said the biggest complication in having a cross-country season at this time of year isn't the weather. He's more concerned about the cross-country season coinciding with the indoor track season.

Many cross-country runners also compete in indoor track, but the length of their races varies. For instance, men's cross-country runners generally compete in the mile, the 3-kilometer run or the 5K in indoor track. The Big Ten pionships are an 8-kilometer event for men and 6 kilometers for women. The NCAA championships go 10 kilometers for the men and 6 for the women.

men's cross-country cham-

That has created a training dilemma for runners. Veatch notes that "while some people think it's the same thing — we're just running — it's quite different disciplines (in) cross-country versus track."

"We're just trying to walk that very thin line of what can make us the best at both currently," said Veatch, who noted the team aspect of competition: "We don't feel it's right or fair to our sprinters, throwers, jumpers or vaulters in indoor track jut to say, 'Hey, we're going to go focus solely on cross-country."

The calendar is crowded for the track and field athletes across college sports: The Pac-12, Big East and several other leagues are holding their conference championships March 5, which is 10 days before the NCAA championships in Stillwater, Oklahoma.

But the Big Ten indoor track championships are Feb. 26-27 and the NCAA indoor championships are March 12-13.

"It was just so much intensity in a sequence," Michigan State coach Lisa Breznau said. "(We thought) really having it earlier might be the better idea for us."

Iconic Temple coach John Chaney dies at 89 — John

Chaney, the legendary Temple University basketball coach, the very face of the school on North Broad Street for a generation and an icon of his sport, died Friday at age 89. Chaney had led Temple to five appearances in the NCAA Elite Eight, the last trip in 2001, the year he was inducted to the Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame. In addition to 17 trips to the NCAA Tournament with the Owls, Chaney won a Division II national title at Cheyney University. Funeral services were pending. Known for his sometimes fiery temperament, his early morning practices, his unique matchup zone defense, his aversion to turnovers, and his fierce devotion to offering a hand to lift those who most needed it most, Chaney retired in 2006 after winning 741 games between Cheyney and Temple. "A man who lived his life the way he wanted, and will be remembered for his service," said Philadelphia Simon Gratz High coach Lynard Stewart, who played for Chaney at Temple. "He's one of a kind," said Bruiser Flint, now a Kentucky assistant coach. Flint first met Chaney as a 10-year-old at his basketball camp, and later went up against him coaching Massachusetts and Drexel. "There's never going to be another John Chaney."
