Texans, Watt agree to part ways — J.J. Watt didn't just play for the Houston Texans, he was the Houston Texans. Now he's gone. "I have sat down with the McNair family and I have asked them for my release and we have mutually agreed to part ways at this time," Watt said Friday in a video on social media. The star defensive end had one year remaining on a six-year, $100 million contract.

The New York-Penn League, which started in 1939, was eliminated and the Pioneer League, founded the same year, lost its affiliated status and became an independent partner league. The Appalachian League was converted to a college summer circuit for rising freshmen and sophomores.

MLB said big league teams will be an average of 200 miles

So they brainstormed, eventually deciding to add "BLM" in big, bold, silvery sequins to the left sleeves of their leotards. The fact it's the same sleeve the Panthers use when they huddle and break as a team isn't a coincidence. They believe the image of more than a dozen arms of athletes of various races leaning in together is a powerful one, particularly for sophomore Ciara Ward, one of two active Black gymnasts on the team.

"They wanted to support me as a Black athlete," Ward said. "At the end of the day, they wanted to speak out against what they know is wrong."

Ward remembers watching the 2012 Summer Olympics when Gabby Douglas became the first Black woman to win an all-around title. That victory resonated with Ward, then a 12-year-old growing up in Maryland who wondered how far the sport could take her.

"Personally I would say (gymnastics) is a predomi-nantly white sport," Ward said. "Sometimes when you don't see representation, you feel like you can't do something."

Watching Douglas have Olympic gold draped around her neck changed Ward's whole closer to their Triple-A af-filiates, allowing most to be within driving distance of their parent team, and that PDL licenses will improve facilities.

Salaries for players with minor league contracts are rising 38% to 72%. The weekly minimum rises from $290 to $400 at rookie level, $290 to $500 at Class A, $350 to $600 at Double-A and $502 to $700 at Triple-A. The platform keeps growing, extending to the empowerment of Black athletes and social justice movements. UCLA senior Nia Dennis' floor exercise routine — which she dubbed "The Culture" — went viral last month thanks in part to her music, a mash-up of hiphop icons Kendrick Lamar and Tupac Shakur.

⁴The purpose of my floor routine is to open the eyes of those around me and also shine a light on Black excellence," Dennis said.

Michelle Obama noticed. Alicia Keys and Biles, too. Yet Dennis stressed the goal isn't to wow as much as it is to inspire.

"I didn't have very many people to look up to," she said. 'So my goal is to always inspire young Black gymnasts."

The link between the performance of Dennis and teammate Margzetta Frazier - who unleashed a Janet Jackson-inspired routine this week that caught the legendary artist's attention — and what is happening at Pitt this weekend is real. Call it the byproduct of taking the paradigm of what coaches used to think the idea of being a "good teammate" was and turning it on its head.

"It felt like if you let the reins go with your student-athletes, that somehow they're going to run down a terrible dark path, and them discovering who they truly are would be antithetical to being the best team player they can be," said UCLA women's coach Chris Waller. "It's been a long process to realize that it's the opposite that's true.

"As an adult, the more we're willing to let them discover who they are, the more they're willing to give themselves to the team. They find themselves standing very intentionally on their own two feet."

At Pitt, that movement is capturing a moment while also attempting to make a lasting impact. The "BLM" leotards have captured attention. But they're not going away Sunday night. Instead, they will remain in the program for years to come, a tacit understanding that progress can't be made in a day or a week or a month but a generation. Persistence and vision are a vital part of that process.

"We wanted to make a point that this is something we live by," Snider said. "It's something we feel very strongly about. So we want it to be bold."
