SPORTS BRIEFING

BASKETBALL

Lillard to participate in 3-point contest — Portland Trail Blazers star Damian Lillard is participating in the 3-point contest in Atlanta on March 7, according to NBA Insider Chris Haynes of Yahoo! Sports. This will be Lillard's third time participating in the contest. Lillard is currently attempting 10.6 3s per game, shooting 38% from that area this season. The NBA plans to hold the 3-point contest and skills challenge before the All-Star game on the same day. The slam dunk contest will reportedly take place during halftime.

WOMEN'S COLLEGE BASKETBALL

Beavers hope to play their way into postseason

BY NICK DASCHEL
The Oregonian

The view is unfamiliar to Oregon State. The view of being on the outside, looking in at the potential NCAA women's basketball tournament field.

As of today, the Beavers are not in the 64-team tourney. The pandemic has taking a wrecking ball to OSU's season and the schedule. OSU is 6-6 overall, and sit in ninth place in the Pac-12 standings at 4-6. The Beavers have played as many as eight fewer conference games than team above them in the standings because of numerous postponements.

Is there a path to the NCAAs, where the Beavers have made six consecutive appearances? Oregon State coach Scott Rueck believes so, and not necessarily one that requires the Beavers to win the Pac-12 tournament, either.

OSU has three resume-building games to finish its schedule. All are on the road:

Oregon State women's basketball coach Scott Rueck during the Beavers' game against Stanford in Corvallis.

at USC (Friday), at UCLA (Sunday), at Oregon (Feb. 28). A win over any of those teams should improve the Beavers' current NCAA NET ranking of No. 52. At the moment, all are Quad 1 wins, which the NCAA tournament committee covets.

In addition, Rueck mentioned the possibility of playing a makeup game next week. He didn't disclose the opponent, but said it is a team that "will help us." There's also a possibility of playing one or more makeup games following the Pac-12 tournament.

And there's the conference tournament, where Oregon State could play as many as four games. The Beavers could significantly enhance their resume playing any of the Pac-12's top eight teams, as all rank among the top 75 in NET ranking.

"We need to win games, bottom line, then take (the decision) out of people's hands. That's been my philosophy forever," Rueck said. "I don't want to be a bubble team. I want this team to compete and earn a spot like we've done for so many years now. ... We're in a position where we could play our way in."

Ducks

"He has not practiced the last two days," Altman said Wednesday morning. "I'm hoping he'll be able to practice a little today and go, but it'll be a game-time (decision). He wanted to go against Arizona and he just couldn't, and I know he'll want to go tomorrow. We'll see what he can do today."

The Ducks' road sweep of the Wildcats and Arizona State last weekend certainly helped their NCAA Tournament prospects, and they'll get even better if they can beat the Buffaloes.

Oregon is No. 46 in the latest NET rankings, while Colorado is No. 20.

In this week's round of bracket projections, Oregon was listed as a No. 10 seed by both Joe Lunardi of ESPN (playing No. 7 Arkansas) and Jerry Palm of CBSports.com (playing No. 7 Purdue). Andy Katz of NCAA.com had the Ducks as a No. 9 seed playing No. 8 Louisville.

Of course, those projections could swing dramatically in either direction before Selection Sunday on March 14 as the Ducks work their way through the final five games of the regular season and then the Pac-12 Tournament in Las Vegas.

"I think (the players) understand that we have to have a good stretch here," Altman said. "Our job as coaches is just to get them ready for Colorado. We don't talk about the whole thing, we just talk about continuing to get better and the next one on the schedule is Colorado."
