all about...
BY JAY BOBBIN
CHRIS NOTH

Christopher David Noth was born on Nov. 13, 1954, in Madison, Wis., but was raised in Connecticut. His mother, Jeanne Parr, was one of CBS News' first female reporters and a talk-show host; his father was a World War II pilot and Korean War officer who later became a marketing-company executive.

After his parents' separation and his father's car-accident death, the teenage Noth got into self-admitted trouble that encompassed vandalism and drug use. Though his mother was going to send him to an all-boys boarding school, he convinced her to let him attend the coed Barlow school instead. There, he developed a love for the arts, and he joined a repertory theater company while attending Marlboro College later.

Expelled from a school where the celebrated Sanford Meisner taught – since students weren't allowed to do professional acting while there, and Noth was discovered doing so – Noth also studied with the renowned Stella Adler. Eventually accepted into both the Juilliard and Yale drama programs, Noth went with the latter and got a scholarship there.

Performing in many plays at Yale ultimately landed Noth an agent. He found theater jobs scarce on the East Coast, but stage employment suddenly picked up for him, and he was in such classics as "Hamlet" and "Arms and the Man."

Following appearances on "Hill Street Blues," Noth filmed the pilot for "Law & Order," and that series became his ticket to stardom. After being fired, reportedly over conflicts with executive producer Dick Wolf, he reprised the role of Detective Mike Logan in "Exiled: A Law & Order Movie" and again on the spinoff "Law & Order: Criminal Intent," which he joined as a regular.

Noth played "Mr. Big," the true love of Carrie Bradshaw, on the series "Sex and the City" and in the two feature films it inspired. Later, he returned to series work in "The Good Wife" as the disgraced politician husband of title character. Married with two children, Noth is back on weekly TV now opposite Queen Latifah in CBS' new reboot of "The Equalizer."
