SPORTS BRIEFING

BASKETBALL

ESPN's Joe Lunardi weighs in on how high Oregon men will be seeded in NCAA Tournament — Oregon could improve its NCAA Tournament seeding with a successful week in Las Vegas. ESPN Bracketologist Joe Lunardi has the Pac-12 regular season champion Ducks (19-5, 14-4 Pac-12) as a No. 6 seed in his projected field of 68 on Tuesday and 23rd overall, down one spot from Monday. Should Oregon win the Pac-12 tournament, which would likely mean multiple Quadrant 1 games to boost its resume, Lunardi believes UO could move up to a 5 seed. "I'm hearing from a lot of people that the Ducks are really good enough to be a top 4 line team — and they probably are from a basketball standpoint," Lunardi said.

Selection committee could take 'reassessment' of Oregon women's tournament seeding — Oregon women's basketball is trending in the wrong direction heading into Selection Monday and it will likely cost the Ducks in terms of their

During the first week of high school athletics, family members and fans were not allowed to watch games from the stands. Instead, they had to resort to either watching livestreams, which brought mixed reviews, or catching a glimpse from outside the facilities.

Pac-12

Oregon will face the winner of the game between Washington State and Arizona State in the Pac-12 quarterfinals on Thursday.

No Arizona
Arizona will not be in Las Vegas. The Wildcats self-imposed a postseason ban as the program awaits word on possible NCAA sanctions. Arizona was sent a notice of allegations by the NCAA last fall and asked for the case to go through the Independent Accountability Resolution Process. The case is ongoing and the Wildcats finished 17-9.

Adjusted format
With Arizona out of the bracket, the Pac-12 Tournament was left with 11 teams, so the conference adjusted the format. Instead of the top four teams getting a first-round bye, the top five will this year, with the Nos. 4 and 5 seeds facing each other in the quarterfinals. That did not sit well with

The increase in capacity numbers will allow more people to attend the events when the changes go into effect on Friday — mainly, family members of the players.

"We are trying to get immediate family members and household members and get that all going Friday when we move," said Bend-La Pine Schools athletic director Dave
