"I thought I was going to have that opportunity last year. But being able to still learn and get information, or being in the big leagues and having those different experiences, going to different ballparks last year is definitely helpful for me moving forward," Lewis said. "It has done a lot for my confidence level and feeling like I've been around a while, even in different capacities, whether it be practices, whether it be just has definitely helped my confidence as well."

Lewis finished last season hitting .262 with 11 home runs and 28 RBIs. His OPS of .801 was very good, but his 71 strikeouts were higher than desired.

Lewis also struggled badly as the league began to adjust over the final month. He hit .373 for the first 28 games with six home runs and 18 RBIs. Over his final 30 games, Lewis hit .154 and struck out 43 times. Some of that was to be expected. Manager Scott Servais

said the message to Lewis was to focus on whether his process and approach at the plate were remaining consistent, not on the numbers.

'That's what we're really harping on with guys like Kyle, all of our guys really, understanding the batting average is going to come and go," Servais said. "That's really what you find out of course this season is are guys mentally able to handle the ups and downs. Now, the more you go through it, the more qualified and capable you are to handle it, but you need to go through it.

"A lot of our guys haven't gone through 162 games of a big-league season yet. It's just where we're at in our development."

One area where Lewis

"Being able to still learn and get information, or being in the big leagues and having those different experiences, going to different ballparks last year is definitely helpful for me moving forward."

- Kyle Lewis. Seattle Mariners outfielder

wanted to get better this offseason was on the defensive side, specifically with his throw ing. He had some spectacular moments in center field as a rookie but last season was his first opportunity to play the position full time.

"If you look around the league, there's not many center fielders that throw people out. They're typically out there, they can cover a lot of ground, they're very athletic, they make plays," Servais said. "We've seen Kyle do all those things but the throwing arm kind of gets forgotten and he doesn't want to be that player. He wants to be a complete player."

All told, he made 69 starts and crisscrossed the country, often borrowing planes from Childress or teammate Mike Skinner, to get between tracks when the two series raced at different venues.

"Racing that much really hid me from a lot of things because of the fact I was so busy. It really allowed me to kind of hide under a rock," Harvick said. "But 2002 was when I realized the magnitude of the situation we were in. Racing so much and often in 2001 really covered all that stuff up."

Harvick spent 13 years driving for Richard Childress Racing and recognizes now how critical that 2001 season was. It was imperative that the organization keep Earnhardt's car on track all season and the Atlanta victory was a morale boost for a heartbroken crew.

"Knowing now what it meant to the sport, and just that moment in general of being able to carry on, was so important," Harvick said.

He moved to Stewart-Haas Racing in 2014, the year he won his only Cup title, but he's been a contender every season. He won a series-high nine races last year but failed to advance to the championship finale.

Five races into this new season, Harvick heads into the anniversary of his first Cup victory looking for some of that success from last year. He's led only 17 laps so far this season, a far cry from the 318 laps he'd led through five races a year ago.

He does sit seventh in the standings with four top-10 finishes. But the rest of the SHR stable is 20th or lower in points and the organization doesn't seem to have the same pace it did in 2020.

SHR is adapting to NA-

SCAR's inspection crackdown on the shape of the rear wheel wells, an area SHR had apparently achieved significant gains by taking advantage of loopholes. Harvick crew chief Rodney Childers told SiriusXM NASCAR Radio the inspection changes cost the team 70 counts of downforce.

"Every year, you don't really know what to expect when things change," Harvick said. "I think, for us, we just missed it on all levels with all the different things that are going on from last year, so I think whether we overthought it or just missed it has yet to be seen."

Australian Jones ties course-record 61 at Honda Classic

- Matt Jones' opening round at the Honda Classic was remarkable. Jones tied the course record Thursday on a typically windy day at PGA National with a bogey-free 9-under 61 giving him a three-shot lead. He matched the mark set by Brian Harman in the second round in 2012, and was one shot better than the final-round 62 that Tiger Woods posted that year. "That's an incredible round of golf," said Lee Westwood, who opened with an even-par 70. "Could be the round of the year." All told, there have been roughly 6,000 tournament rounds at the Honda since it moved to PGA National in 2007. None was better than the one Thursday from Jones, an Australian ranked No. 83 in the world. Russell Henley and Aaron Wise shot 64s, matching the best score at the Honda by anyone — Jones excluded — since Rory McIlroy and Russell Knox had 63s in 2014. And Henley and Wise still walked off the course three shots back. U.S. Ryder Cup captain Steve Stricker, Scott Harrington, Kevin Chappell, Joseph Bramlett and Cameron Davis shot 66. Defending champion Sungjae Im opened with a 68.

Former Ducks standout Chung announces retirement from NFL — Patrick Chung was expected to return to play in 2021 after opting to sit out the 2020 NFL season because of the coronavirus pandemic. The New England Patriots' safety has changed his mind and announced his retirement. Chung made the announcement on his Instagram account Thursday morning. Chung, 33, said he decided to "hang up the cleats" and "it's time to start a new life" after winning three Super Bowl titles with the Patriots. The former Oregon Ducks star finishes his 11-year career with 778 total tackles, 21 tackles for loss, 11 interceptions and five fumbles recovered. Chung was the Patriots' second-round pick (No. 34) in the 2009 NFL draft. Chung played 10 of his 11 years in the league with the Patriots, with one year in Philadelphia.
