NHL ref fired over penalty comment — Tim Peel's career as an NHL referee is over after his voice was picked up by a TV microphone saying he wanted to call a penalty against the Nashville Predators. The league on Wednesday announced Peel "no longer will be working NHL games now or in the future." The 54-year-old Peel had already made plans to retire next month. "Nothing is more important than ensuring the integrity of our game," NHL vice president of hockey operations Colin Campbell said in a statement. The NHL determined it was Peel's voice that was heard on the TV broadcast of the Predators home game against the Detroit Red Wings after Nashville forward Viktor Arvidsson was issued a minor tripping penalty. "It wasn't much, but I wanted to get a (expletive) penalty against Nashville early in the," the unidentified official was heard saying before the microphone was cut.

GOLF

Dell Match Play kicks off with surprising results — The opening round of group play Wednesday in the Dell Technologies Match Play featured 16 of the 32 matches going the distance, Rory McIlroy suffering his worst loss in 10 years (to Ian Poulter) and some of the best moments belonging to newcomers to this fickle event. That starts with Antoine Rozner, the 28-year-old from Paris who only got into this World Golf Championship by winning the Qatar Masters two weeks ago with a 60-foot birdie putt on the final hole. Clinging to a oneshot lead over U.S. Open champion Bryson DeChambeau, a tree blocking the 54 yards that separated him from the flag, Rozner hit a bold flop shot that settled 8 feet behind the hole. Finishing with a flair, the Frenchman holed the putt for a 2-up victory over DeChambeau.

"For those (rodeo competitors) in the Northwest, this is their first opportunity to compete," Fast said. "The great Northwest talent gets to compete against the big boys." According to Fast, the total prize purse for the High Desert Stampede is $125,000, up from about $90,000 in 2019.

Blake Knowles, a steer wrestler based in Heppner, said that due to the pandemic most rodeo riders in 2020 did not come close to the 80 to 100 events they typically attend in a year, so they are eager to take advantage of every rodeo that is being staged.

"It has created a situation as a professional rodeo athlete you can't overlook in the world we live in today," Knowles said. "If someone is willing to go through the effort to have their event, as a rodeo competitor, we have to be there."

Cowboys, like Knowles, missed out on most of the larger rodeos in 2020 because they were canceled due to COVID-19. In the past year, instead of competing, there was more of an emphasis on spending time with family while practicing and developing the horses, which cowboys do not

"You feel all the nerves coming out. I've missed that. I'm really most excited about getting my competitive juices going again and being that fierce competitor that I know I am."

Wie West has probably been the most talked about LPGA Tour player since she turned pro in 2005, even though she only Wie has lived with fame her entire career, from winning the U.S. Women's Amateur Public Links at age 13, competing against the men on the PGA Tour at age 14 and turning pro at age 16. She has five LPGA victories, most notably the U.S. Women's Open at Pinehurst No. 2 in 2014. Her last win was the HSBC Women's World Championship at the start of the 2018 season.

Her career has been slowed by injuries, most recently to her right hand. She had surgery in October 2018, returned in Thailand the following February and had to withdraw from her title defense in Singapore a week later as she still coped with

She last played in the Women's PGA Championship at Hazeltine in June 2019, shooting 84-82.

She married West, the son of basketball great Jerry West, in August 2019. Their daughter was born June 19.

Two years ago, she thought she was ready to get on with the rest of her life.

"After KPMG in 2019 I thought I was done, especially when I found out I was pregnant later that year," she said. "I thought that cemented it. I thought there was no chance of coming back, and I told my husband that. He was like, 'No, no, just think it through?

'Then we found out that Makenna was going to be a girl and that just changed my perspective of everything," she added. "It was crazy how just that one little fact just changes everything. Then I started to think, 'You know, I kind of want to do it. I want to show her in real time that I can — that I play golf. It's one thing to have her watch You Tube videos, but it's another thing to have her watch me with her own eyes. Seeing me go out there, it work out hard, and try to lead by example."

She also said she was motivated watching Tiger Woods play with his son, Charlie, in the PNC Championship in December.

"That moment that Tiger had with Charlie, that is the first thing that popped to my mind and that's been a huge motiva-tion and that's been a new dream of mine,"

Wie West said. She said her daughter "really likes to crawl on the green and pick the ball out of the hole. She loves golf balls, so I'm hoping that's a positive sign." Wie West said her parents flew over from Hawaii to help her care for her daughter. "We're doing grandma daycare this week," she said.
