Oregon State announcer attacked, left 'a little sore' but goes to work — Mike Parker was feeling a little sore Sunday morning, but not from overcelebrating Oregon State's 65-58 win over Loyola of Chicago on Saturday. The Beavers' veteran play-by-play radio voice said he was involved in an unsettling incident a few hours before Saturday's game that left him with a torn shirt and abrasions to his elbow. Parker, who has been in Indianapolis for more than a week during Oregon State's NCAA Tournament run, loves walking the city. On a walk Saturday, a man approached Parker and said, "I need to talk to you. ... I need to know what's in your bag." The man continued to press. Eventually, Parker told him, "It's none of your business, but it's my work stuff," then continued to walk. The man then asked, "Do you have a bomb in that bag?" The man ran after Parker and tackled him. There were many people in the area, including Indianapolis police officers who were riding the area on bicycles. They came to Parker's aid and talked to him. Parker told the officer he did not want to press charges. He did not know what happened to the man from there. "I'm a little sore from the fall, but I'm fine. I had no issues during the game," Parker said.

Overseas Tokyo ticket holders may not get full refunds

— Many fans living outside Japan who bought Tokyo Olympic tickets from brokers — so-called Authorized Ticket Resellers — will not get full refunds. Organizers and the Japanese government decided to bar most fans from abroad because of the COVID-19 pandemic. Tokyo organizers have said they would refund the face value of the tickets but are not responsible for other added charges.

Oregon and USC have been a big part of the Pac-12's unexpected success in the Circle City.

Picked to be the worst among the major conferences, the big league out West opened the NCAA Tournament with nine straight wins and got four teams through to the Sweet 16.

Oregon State and UCLA already advanced, so the showdown between the Ducks and Trojans meant a Pac-12 trio in the Elite Eight.

Oregon was in a familiar position, running this deep into March for the fourth time in five NCAA Tournaments. USC had to reach back to the 2006-07 team with Nick Young and Taj Gibson for its last Sweet 16 ride.

The Trojans won the teams' lone regular-season meeting -58 by getting off to a fast

They did the same in the rematch by slowing the fast-moving Ducks.

Normally free flowing on offense, Oregon had a hard time solving USC's zone between Offensively, USC looked more like the Ducks than they did, pouring in 3s and getting shots at the rim, using a 17-2 run to go up 14. The Trojans led 41-26 at halftime.

USC stretched the lead to 20 in the opening 3½ minutes of the second half before the Ducks finally came to life. An 11-0 run cut USC's lead to 69-60, but the rally ran out of steam when Mobley threw down a two-handed dunk over Franck Kepnang.

Oregon was trying to get to its fourth straight Elite Eight and second consecutive Final Four. The Ducks had struggled heading into the NCAA Tournament, dropping five of six before getting to Texas. Evans also struggled late in the season and hadn't played well in the first two games of the tournament. She hadn't scored more than 15 points in any of the five ACC or NCAA Tournament games before Sunday.

The Cardinals hadn't played well at the start of either of their NCAA games. Coach Jeff Walz joked before the game that he would change his pregame speech after the Cardinals trailed by nine after one quarter in the first round against Marist and by 15 against Northwestern.

Louisville didn't light it up early this time, either, but managed a 10-8 lead after the opening quarter. The teams combined to shoot 9 for 35 in the first 10 minutes.

The Ducks missed all nine

3-point attempts in the first half and finished the game 2 for 18.

Indy Bound

Oregon coach Kelly Graves will travel to Indianapolis in support of his son, Will, who is a walk-on for the Gonzaga men's team. The unbeaten Bulldogs will play in an Elite Eight game on Tuesday against Southern California.

Oregon State has held Tennessee, Oklahoma State with potential No. 1 overall NBA draft pick Cade Cunningham, and Loyola Chicago to 61 points per game on 31% shooting, including 23% (18 of 78) from 3-point range. They also were successful throwing out different looks, from man to a 1-3-1 zone defense, in Saturday's win against the Ramblers.

Tinkle has pointed to the implementation of a drill as a catalyst for defensive improvement.

"It's a 4-on-4 drill, and we rotate and basically what you do is you can't allow the offensive player to penetrate," junior Warith Alatishe said. "You have to get in your gaps and help out your teammates. So I think over time, just continuously doing that drill has gotten our chemistry

"We know that if we get beat, our teammate has our back.

Double-digit history

Add Oregon State to the relatively short list of double-digit seeds that have reached a regional final in the NCAA Tournament.

The Beavers became the 18th team seeded 10th or lower to reach the Elite Eight since the field expanded to 64 teams in 1985 when they beat Loyola Chicago 65-58 on Saturday. Coach Wayne Tinkle's team is the second No. 12 seed to make a regional final, joining Missouri in 2002. Those Tigers ended up losing to No. 2 seed Oklahoma.

"It's an amazing feeling to be just part of the success, really," Oregon State star Ethan Thompson said. "Beaver Nation has waited a long time. And when coach Tinkle and the rest of the coaching staff got here, this was the goal in mind to turn it into successful basketball. And we're here now. So it's just been a great feeling and extremely blessed to be a part of it."

No team seeded worse than 12th has made the Elite Eight, but No. 15 seed Oral Roberts made a strong bid for history later Saturday. The Golden Eagles led No. 3 seed Arkansas by double digits in the second half, but the Razorbacks rallied to win 72-70.

cuse and hot-shooting Buddy Boeheim allowing a national-low 37.3% shooting. They held the Orange to 28% while locking down on "Buddy Buckets," who finished with 12 points after averaging 28 over his last four games.

Houston has held three tournament opponents to 60 or fewer points while outrebounding each team by at least nine. That included Syracuse finishing with 46 points, its lowest output in any NCAA Tournament game.

Now the Cougars are preparing to face a fourth double-digit seed in as many games to play for a Final Four berth. Tenth-seeded Rutgers was the highest-seeded team beaten by the Cougars so far.

Houston head coach Kelvin Sampson talks to his team in the first half of a Sweet 16 game against Syracuse in the NCAA men's college basketball tournament at Hinkle Fieldhouse in Indianapolis on Saturday. "We know how good Oregon State is," Sampson said Sunday. "So we're going to have to play good. They're a lot more like us in that they get on the boards with athleticism and they play physical — should be a very good ballgame. We're looking forward to it."

"You never know how it's going to go," Jarreau said of the bracket. "I'm grateful for us to be in this position. We just control what we can control. That's not our problem. But like I said, we're grateful."
