UConn's Bueckers 1st freshman AP player of the year

— Paige Bueckers is in a class all by herself. UConn's star guard became the first freshman ever to win The Associated Press women's basketball player of the year award Wednesday. Bueckers helped lead the Huskies to their 13th consecutive Final Four with 28 points in the regional final win over Baylor on Monday night, just the latest star turn for the phenomenal 19-year-old Minnesota native. "It's amazing, surreal for peo-ple to think of me that highly and to be in that position as a freshman," Bueckers said. "To get this award, I'm extremely humbled and grateful." Bueckers received 21 votes from the 30-member national media panel that chooses the weekly AP Top 25. Dana Evans of Louisville was second with four votes; Rhyne Howard of Kentucky received two votes; and Michigan's Naz Hillmon, Texas' Charli Collier and Iowa freshman Caitlin Clark all received a vote. Former UConn greats Maya Moore and Breanna Stewart both won the award as sophomores. All other winners have been juniors or seniors since the AP started honoring players in 1995.

Maryland's Frese voted AP coach of the year — Maryland coach Brenda Frese was honored as The Associated Press women's basketball coach of the year Wednesday for the second time in her career. Frese received eight votes from the 30-member national media panel that votes on the weekly AP Top 25. Stanford coach Tara VanDerveer and North Carolina State coach Wes Moore each received seven votes. "It's special. Obviously its going to be one I never forget," said Frese, who also was AP coach of the year 19 years ago when she was at Minnesota." Maryland lost five starters from last year's Big Ten championship team, but didn't miss a beat, winning the conference for the sixth time in seven years and going 26-3. The Terrapins lost in the Sweet 16 to Texas. Geno Auriemma, Muffet McGraw and Kim Mulkey are the only other coaches to win the award multiple times.

He's right. Without winning the Pac-12 tournament, the Beavers would not have made the NCAA tournament. But after winning three games in three days, Oregon State advanced to the field of 64 for only the second time since 1990.

When Johnson was an OSU student in the early 1980s, the Beavers were a mainstay at the top of the college basketball

"I was hoping to stay for a week because we wanted us to go to the Final Four. It has been a fun couple of weeks. Compared to where we were a month ago, we didn't have a snowball's change of getting to Indianapolis."

rankings, yet, never made it as far as this year's OSU squad.

Johnson has made it a point to be there in person each time his alma mater makes it to a national tournament. Whether it was the Fiesta Bowl for the 2000-01 football team, or each of the baseball team's six trips to the College World Series between 2005 and 2018. He was even planning on making a pit stop in San Antonio had the OSU women's basketball team advanced to the Sweet 16.

This year's trip was on par with all those other trips, mainly because it was so unexpected. He had great seats to watch the run and was able to meet (and thank) OSU coach Wayne Tinkle.

"What made this so good is that we weren't supposed to be there," Johnson said. "I think we were the best story out of the whole freakin' tournament."

A court ruling is expected later this year.

A'patchwork' of rules

This isn't Courtney's first rodeo on the issue. SB 5 is nearly identical to Senate Bill 1501, which Courtney introduced in February 2020.

SB 1501 rolled through the 2020 legislative session, passing the Senate 24 to 5 a couple weeks after it was introduced but stumbling near the end of the political race. The bill didn't get a final vote before the session adjourned in early March 2020.

During public hearings, Oregon university officials and athletes urged the House Committee on Rules to delay state action until NCAA regulations on the subject could be adopted.

Oregon State University gymnast Halli Briscoe, OSU's Student Athlete Advisory Committee president and chair of the Pac-12 Student-Athlete Leadership Team, told the committee action by states could lead to a "patchwork" of rules for athletes.

"I fear unintended consequences including a patchwork of inconsistent state laws, unfair recruiting and competitive advantages, difficulty monitoring compensation, inequitable treatment of female athletes and the exploitation of athletes by profession and commercial enterprises," Briscoe said during a February 2020 public hearing.

Courtney, who testified before the House committee, said SB 1501 was "long overdue."

"This bill is about fairness," Courtney said in late February

"These student-athletes give everything to their school and their sport. They create revenue for their school through sold-out stadiums and increased enrollment. But these athletes don't get a dime of that money. They don't even get a percentage of the sales of jerseys with their own name on it. It's time that their contributions are recognized in a substantial way."

— Oregon State University gymnast Halli Briscoe, OSÚ's Student Athlete Advisory Committee president and chair of the Pac-12 Student-Athlete Leadership Team

If it had been approved, Courtney's SB 1501 would have taken effect in 2023 to give the NCAA time to draft national rules. His SB 5, however, includes an emergency clause, meaning that if approved, it would go into effect the day it's signed.
