SPORTS BRIEFING

BASKETBALL

Oregon's Duarte wins Jerry West Shooting Guard of the Year award — Chris Duarte played a lot like “The Logo” during his final season at Oregon. Fittingly, Duarte was named Saturday as the Jerry West Shooting Guard of the Year by the Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame. He is the first Pac-12 player to receive the award. Duarte was a third-team All-American during the 2020-21 season and one of just two players nationally who averaged at least 17.0 points and 1.9 steals per game while shooting 50% from the field. “It is an honor to win this award,” Duarte said in a statement. “It’s an amazing feeling. This was one of the goals that I worked for this year and it feels good to have that hard work pay off.” West’s likeness has been used as the NBA logo since 1969. Duarte, who had 13 assists during Oregon’s two NCAA Tournament games, is projected as a late first-round pick in the 2021 NBA draft.

Oregon State, Tinkle agree on contract through 2026-27 season — Wayne Tinkle was rewarded Monday following a breakout men’s basketball season when the Oregon State coach and school agreed on a three-year contract extension. Tinkle, 55, now has a six-year contract at Oregon State, a deal that expires following the end of the 2026-27 season. Tinkle had two years remaining on a contract he signed in 2019, plus a contractually-obligated additional year after the Beavers qualified for this year’s NCAA Tournament. Financial details of the contract are not immediately known, although it is expected the buyout was increased. Tinkle currently has a $750,000 buyout if he leaves for another job during the next 12 months. Tinkle, hired prior to the 2014-15 season after an eight-year run at Montana, is slated to make $2.2 million in 2021-22, and $2.3 million in 2022-23.

EQUESTRIAN

Eastern Oregon instructor wins national horsemanship competition — An instructor at Treasure Valley Community College recently clinched top honors at a prestigious horsemanship competition in Fort Worth, Texas. Wade Black, who directs the college’s Equine Science program and teaches horse production and horsemanship, claimed the colt-starting championships at the Road to the Horse competition late last month. The win included a $75,000 payout for the college teacher. Black won the wild card division of the Road to the Horse in 2019 to earn a slot at the 2021 Road to the Horse event. The Road to the Horse is a three-day colt-starting competition that began in 2003. Contestants have three days to start untrained 3-year-old geldings and vie for victory by negotiating a series of tasks — including an obstacle course — over three days. “This prestigious win showcases the world-class caliber of equine instruction and training we offer at TVCC,” said Dana Young, TVCC president.
