Anthony Hopkins in a scene from "The Father" (2020).

quiet chaos that is going on in Anthony's mind.

It also benefits from two incredibly strong performances from Hopkins and Coleman who work through the ebbs and flows of Anthony's changes in behavior and his paranoia as well as the heartbreak that both of them feel.

Hopkins delivers a career best in a lifetime of remarkable roles, and Coleman wears every emotion — grief, annoyance, exhaustion, guilt and overall sadness — on her face, often all at the same time. You recognize everything immediately.

The script is tight and deeply in line with its theatrical roots, with little to no exposition adding to the confusion factor and allowing the audience to try and make sense of it all on their own.

Zeller uses the camera so effectively, allowing the actors to use their full range of emotions and reactions together, that it makes it that much more real. He also utilizes color and tone in the set so well, going from warm and rich mid-century styles to a cooler modern look and finally a cold sterility with light just out of reach.

Even though I will sing its praises, I never want to watch the film again. It's too real at times, and even in the course of writing this review I found myself sobbing onto my keyboard — as I have seen family members lost to this disease in my own life.

While it is devastating to be reminded of those times, I would counter "The Father" gives an alternate perspective on this situation and does it with such grace that it may offer you catharsis, knowing that you were not alone.

Bend Regal Cinemas to reopen Friday

Movies are back on Bend's biggest screens this weekend. Regal Cinemas Old Mill Stadium 16 and IMAX reopens Friday after being closed since October 2020.

According to the company website, guests can expect resumed safety measures including face masks required throughout the site except when eating or drinking, increased fresh air intake in auditoriums, two empty seats between groups, increased hand washing for employees as well as tickets and concessions available for purchase through the Regal Cinemas app.

With new releases trickling out including "Mortal Kombat" this weekend, local movie lovers can grab a large popcorn and soda and take in the big hits the way they were meant to be seen — on the big screen — as the summer blockbuster season (hopefully) gets underway.
