QB Anthony Brown shines in Ducks' spring game Saturday — Anthony Brown led the first-team offense effectively and Oregon's defense generated some pass rush and turnovers in a competitive spring game. Brown was 17 of 26 for 188 yards and a touchdown and a fumble, the defense was credited with nine sacks and two fumble recoveries. The game was decided on a walk-off two-point conversion run by Robby Ashford as the offense beat the defense, 35-34, as the Ducks wrapped up spring practice Saturday afternoon at Autzen Stadium.

Ducks, Beavers players selected among final rounds of NFL draft — Three Oregon players — all defensive backs — and an Oregon State player were selected among the final three rounds of the NFL draft on Saturday in Cleveland. Ducks cornerback Deommodore Lenoir was chosen in the fifth round, No. 172 overall, by the San Francisco 49ers; in the sixth round Oregon safety Brady Breeze went to the Tennessee Titans (No. 215) and the Chicago Bears picked corner Thomas Graham Jr. (No. 228); in the seventh round, just three picks before the end, the Detroit Lions, who had taken Oregon's Penei Sewell with the seventh overall selection, grabbed Oregon State running back Jermar Jefferson. Late on Friday night, the Dallas Cowboys drafted Oregon State defensive back Nahshon Wright in the third round, 99th overall.

Bradley, Burns hang on to share of lead at Valspar — Keegan Bradley hit one of his worst shots of the round and it led to eagle. Sam Burns hit a pair of tee shots right where he wanted and they cost him bogeys. They finished where they started Saturday in the Valspar Championship, tied for the lead, and now they have company from Max Homa. Burns had a three-shot lead with five holes remaining, but he had to make an 8-foot bogey putt on the 18th hole for a 2-under 69 just to share the lead. Bradley and Burns were at 14-under 199, tying the 54-hole tournament record set by K.J. Choi in 2002 and matched by Adam Hadwin in 2017. Homa fired a 66 and trails by one stroke.

MLB

"Pitching has always been further ahead in the analytical world, and applying information to the competition has been much faster on the run-prevention side than the run-production side," said Detroit Tigers manager A.J. Hinch, a former big league catcher.

"I have great concern that our sport has turned into a lack of offense and the strikeout-homer-walk Three True Outcomes is not our best entertainment product.... We're trending in the wrong direction. It doesn't mean we can just snap our fingers and make a rule change or do one simple thing and all of a sudden we're going to turn into a more balanced sport."

Detroit finished April with a .199 batting average, on track to shatter the low of .211 set by the 1910 Chicago White Sox.

Just 16.6% of pitches have been put in play this season through the middle of last week, according to MLB Statcast, matching last year and down from 18.6% in 2015.

Perhaps it's the Rawlings baseballs, which were slightly deadened this year in a change MLB said an independent lab found would cause balls to fly 1 to 2 feet shorter when hit over 375 feet. Or maybe it's the five teams that added humidors to their stadiums, raising the total to 10 of 30 with humidity-controlled storage spaces. Home runs have dropped from a record 1.39 per team per game in 2019 to 1.28 in 2020's shortened season to 1.14 this year, the lowest since 2015.

Baseball Commissioner Rob Manfred declined comment, saying it was only one month. Union head Tony Clark, a former All-Star first baseman, also declined comment.

Many baseball veterans try not to draw conclusions from Aprils, when cold and blustery weather can hold down offense. Still, a comparison to previous seasons through April is startling.

The batting average was the lowest through April since .230 in 1968, according to the Elias Sports Bureau. The .309 on-base percentage was the lowest since .294 in 1968 and the .3894 slugging percentage a mark not seen since 2014's .3389, Elias said.

"It's an inconsistent weather month, which tends to depress offense a little bit. I tend to kind of hold off judgment until we get into the summer months," New York Yankees manager Aaron Boone said. "I would say pitching now is as good as it's been and as specific as it's been. I think people really know better than ever what makes a pitcher really good and what their true strengths are other than what you think their strengths are and how you can target different matchups."

Jacob deGrom of the Mets has a 0.51 ERA, on track to break the post dead-ball era record of 1.12 set by the St. Louis Cardinals' Bob Gibson in 1968.

"You see deGrom — you can see guys go out and punch out 14, 15, you're like, OK, it's not like that big of a deal anymore," Mattingly said. "It seems like teams are striking out 12, 15 times a night, and that's just normal."

MLB instituted a new rule in 2020 requiring a pitcher to face three batters or complete a half-inning. Among the experiments in the minor leagues that start Tuesday are requiring Double-A infielders to keep both feet in the infield at the start of every play; and expanding bases from 15-by-15 inches to 18-by-18 at Triple-A. In the independent Atlantic League starting Aug. 3, the pitching rubber will be moved back 12 inches to 61 feet, 6 inches.

In a sign of pitching dominance, there have been 69 team shutouts this season, a pace that would total 439 and smash the record of 359 in 1915.

"I think the big thing nobody talks about is the proliferation of the breaking ball," Los Angeles Angels manager Joe Maddon said. "Everybody's worried about velocity. It's about the breaking ball to me. That's where a lot of the numbers have gone to. Hitters normally could catch up to the velocity, if that's all they're going to see."

Maddon is against rules changes to boost batters.

"I don't like legislating hardly anything," Maddon said. "I'm much more that things change based on people making adaptations and adjustments based on what they're seeing."
